Be Thankful, Anyhow
The Inventive American
Russia's Confessions
The Deadly Fire Bomb

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

Tomorrow the nation gives thanks officially. It should be a cheerful Thanksgiving dinner aboard the President's warship, south-bound, less cheerful for Republican leaders.

The nation always has cause for thanksgiving, owning the finest slice of territory on the earth's surface with wealth above and below ground entirely "beyond the dreams of avarice."

That we have millions unemployed, millions worried, millions exploited by the more cunning, and more millions exploited by politicians, public gamblers and dealers in profitable superstitions is our own national fault.

There is comfort in the knowledge that we shall outgrow it.

Our real trouble is IGNORANCE. Nobody realizes how dense it is. Public schools fight against it, but slowly.

Under our system of education children are forced to think and learn a little when they want to do neither, and stop thinking and learning, as adults, when learning really should begin.

The 100th anniversary of the American patent system is celebrated by an airplane broadcast over Washington, announcing names of great inventors. Bell, telephone; Edison, electric light and phonograph; Fulton, successful steamboat; Goodyear, vulcanizing process for rubber; Charles Martin Hall, aluminum; Howe, sewing machine; McCormick, reaper; Mergenthaler, linotype; Morse, telegraph; Westinghouse, airbrakes; Wilbur Wright, airplane; Eli Whitney, cotton gin.

Ours seems to be an inventive race, due to the mixture of races; too bad the government does not take more interest in inventions, particularly in Wilbur Wright's invention, the airplane.

Stalin's government sentenced to death eight Russians and one German engineer; all had confessed to sabotage in a Siberian coal mine, causing the deaths of Soviet workers.

Germany, through her government and newspapers, rages. Russia is accused of forcing confessions of guilt by "solitary confinement in dark dungeons, standing before red hot ovens and week-long, constant questioning."

It is pointed out that one Russian engineer, Peschachonoff, who confessed to his guilt on this occasion, had done so at a previous murder trial only to be mysteriously released, that he might confess again. If charges are true, he has been used as a goat is used in Chicago stock yards, to lead in sheep that are to have their throats cut.

Stalin, more and more a man of few words, pays no attention to Germany's protests. He gets the confessions, then executes, in business-like fashion.

Chancellor Hitler tells workers of the National Socialist Party in a speech, not published, that "serious times are ahead for Germany, but Germany is now well enough armed to meet any enemy."

The Kaiser, who preceded Hitler, said the same thing in 1914; he was mistaken. Nobody can predict anything accurately about war, until it is known exactly what airplane explosives and gas will do, on a big scale. They may, by hideous slaughter, actually discourage war.

In the big war, France and Germany sat opposite each other in trenches, for years. In their next war, Paris and Berlin might be wiped out, five million French and Germans killed in the first 48 hours. "Fast work."

Madrid's miserable situation is complicated by widespread dropping of fire bombs, in which chemicals can be used on which water has no extinguishing effect. Russian chemists, ablest in the world next to those of Germany, are doubtless specializing on incendiary bombs, for the possible benefit of Japan.

John Harvard, who started a little college three hundred years ago, would be delighted to know that that institution now possesses an endowment of more than one hundred and thirty-four million dollars, including land or buildings of the university.

Harvard's income in the last fiscal year was above twelve million dollars, all but eighty-seven thousand spent on education. And what is more important than dollars, Harvard has one of the world's best educators in its president, Dr. Conant.

CURLEY MAY PICK BRIGGS FOR OVERHOLSER'S POST

PICK RAIDERS; CURLEY SET FOR FIGHT

Captain James T. Sheehan, new Boston anti-crime czar, today picked a squad of seven "untouchables" for his drive against vice and gambling.

At the same time friends of Police Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney rallied to the aid of the commissioner, appealing to members of the executive council to fight the governor's expected move to oust him.

Captain Sheehan picked two members of the Special Service Squad, four men from his old command, Division 10, Roxbury Crossing, and one patrolman from Dorchester for his cleanup drive.

The first two are Sergeant Joseph F. Condon and Special Officer William E. Jennings, both of whom have figured in important arrests since the special service squad was formed.

SIAMESE PART

Twin Cut From Dead, 'Rebuilt'

New York, Nov. 25 (AP)—Simplicio Godino, "Siamese" twin whose brother died last night after an illness of 10 days, was a complete man today for the first time in his life, made so by a rare feat of surgery which separated him from his "other half."

Lucio, the twin who died, possessed the complete body, and takes it with him to his grave. Plastic surgery gave the living brother the missing part—a lower colon. This was the only organ in common between these 28-year-old twins.

NAZI, JAPAN PACT HITS RED PERIL

Berlin, Nov. 25 (AP)—Germany and Japan signed today an agreement directed against the Communist Internationale.

The alliance was signed at the foreign office after the government had announced it would publish an "official declaration" this afternoon.

Japan was represented by Japanese ambassador Kintomo Mushakoje.

The agreement, asserting the international Communist organization, with headquarters at Moscow, is aimed "at directing and violating existing states with all means at

ENDS MYSTERY:

Lindy Calls To Say He Is Safe

London, Nov. 25 (INS)—Anxiety of Irish and English airport officials over the safety of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, an anxiety which extended for nearly 24 hours through last night and today, was all for naught, it developed this morning.

Colonel Lindbergh, who left Baldonnel airport, near Dublin, yesterday on a short hop for Croydon airdrome, near London, had been mysteriously missing.

He failed to appear at Croydon, and, because he had taken of in a fog, airport officials expressed concern for his safety.

Late today it was learned the American flyer had landed yesterday at the Sealand Aerodrome, Chester, near Liverpool, just across the Irish sea from Dublin. He arrived at Chester soon after leaving the Irish Free State.

Thus, while air officials in both Dublin and London were worried about Colonel Lindbergh, and while the British press and American correspondents were unable to locate him, the flyer was safe at Chester.

PROTEST QUIZ BY COUNCIL IS DELAYED

Governor Curley today called off the executive council hearing on the matter of replacing Mental Diseases Commissioner Winfred Overholser with Dr. David L. William of Jamaica Plain.

At the same time the name of Dr. L. Vernon Briggs, noted psychiatrist and state alienist and creator of the nationally-recognized Briggs' Law, was mentioned as Dr. Overholser's possible successor.

What might have overshadowed this—a battle over the removal of Richard D. Grant, one time gubernatorial secretary, from the public utilities commission—was also side-tracked.

ONE OBJECTION CITED

The governor said he hadn't yet received a report from Professor John J. Murray, chairman of the utilities commission, on Grant's alleged "failure to cooperate."

Dr. Briggs himself was present in the executive council chamber when the governor stated that the

SANTASON TOMORROW

5000 People, 30 Bands to Parade

Grown-ups and youngsters—one half million strong—will crowd the streets of downtown Boston tomorrow to welcome Santason, mythical son of Santa Claus, upon his eighth flight from the North Pole to this city to lead one of the most colorful parades ever witnessed here.

Leaving Detroit, Mich., shortly before dawn, Santason will land his giant speedy clipper ship, "The Spirit of the North," in the Charles River basin at Embankment road at 10:30 o'clock.

In a parade of floats in which all the characters have been selected from the colorful land of comic strip and story-fancy, the spectacle is only rivalled by the Mardi Gras of New Orleans.

Edward R. Mitton, executive vice-president of Jordan Marsh Company, sponsors of the annual Thanksgiving Day Santason reception and parade, will head the reception committee which includes four children from Greater Boston settlement houses.

These youngsters will represent the children of New England and to them will Santason bring gifts, and, later in the week, honor them its command," said the two governments believed tolerance of such alleged interference "threatens world peace at large."

1—Inform and consult with each other and execute co-operative action to combat Communist Internationale activity.

2—Invite third parties "whose domestic peace is endangered by the disruptive activities of the Communist Internationale to join them.

WILL SWAP DATA

4—Take strict measures at home and abroad against persons who directly or indirectly serve the Communist Internationale, and,

5—Co-operate in an international campaign against Communism through a permanent German-Japanese commission.

The agreement consists of a preamble, three articles and a supplementary protocol under which both nations to the alliance agree to inform each other of all measures considered needful to halt the spread of Communism.

"The German government and the Japanese government," the preamble stated, "recognizing that the aim of the Communist Internationale, known as the Komintern, is directed at disrupting and violating existing states with all means at its command and convinced that to tolerate the Communist Internationale's interference with the internal affairs of nations not only endangers their internal peace and social well-being but threatens world peace at large, animated by a desire to work in common against Communist disruptive influences, have arrived at the following agreement.

"1—The high contracting parties agree to mutually inform each other concerning the activities of the Communist Internationale, to consult with each other concerning measures to combat this activity, and to execute these measures in close co-operation with each other.

"2—The two high contracting states will jointly invite third parties whose domestic peace is endangered by the disruptive activities of the Communist Internationale to embark upon measures for warding these off in accordance with the spirit of this agreement or to join in it.

"3—For this agreement both the German and Japanese texts are regarded as original versions. It becomes effective the day of signing and is in force for a period of five years.

"The high contracting states will, at the proper time before expiration of this period, arrive at an understanding with each other concerning the form this co-operation is to take."

(Soviet Russia, contending the German-Japanese agreement was a "military alliance" against the Moscow Government, refused last Saturday to sign a new agreement allowing Japan to fish in eastern Siberian waters.

STRICT MEASURES

(The fishing arrangement, regarded as highly important to Japan because she gets the bulk of her fish from these waters, would have extended the rights for eight years. The present agreement expires December 31.)

The supplementary German-Japanese agreement provided for constant cooperation between police officials of both nations in the exchange of information.

It further included provisions for "strict measures" against any person engaged at home or abroad, directly or indirectly, in services for the Communist Internationale.

Finally, a permanent commission of representatives of both nations was created to make effective the cooperative international campaign against Communism.

One of the significant features of the agreement, diplomats said, was the fact that it is geographically unlimited.

Nazis Give Up Pacific Isles to Japan

London, Nov. 25 (INS)—In a secret protocol to the new German-Japanese pact, Germany surrenders all claims to her former Pacific Islands now held by Japan, The Evening Standard reported today.

The protocol also settles spheres of economic interest between the two nations in the Dutch-East Indies.

The islands went to Japan after the World War. Recently, with the German demand for colonial expansion, it had been reported Berlin would demand their return.

Siamese Twins and Wives at Hospital Bed

where the brothers had made a theatrical appearance. At first it was believed Lucio had pneumonia, but today the fatal malady was announced as rheumatic fever.

SISTER WIVES GRIEVE

Simplicio, who, perforce, lay in the hospital bed with his brother, was not ill for an instant. He bewailed the plight that kept him in bed although he felt well. He took his brother's death bravely.

During the operation the twins' wives remained in a room in the hospital, shaken with grief and anxiety. They are sisters, the former Natividad and Victoriana Matos, and were married to the twins in Manila in 1929. They were still at the hospital today, where it was announced Simplicio, after a blood transfusion, had eaten and was doing "very well." He had a prolonged sleep.

The brothers were connected at a three-quarter angle by muscular tissue at the base of their spines. They were virtually back to back. When one walked forward the other walked backward.

PARTED WITHOUT PAIN

Their nervous systems were likewise separate. This made it possible to do the separation operation without an anesthetic. The separation line was made through the tissues of Lucio, after he died, and with no pain to the living brother.

After the separation the plastic surgery operation was done with all the usual technique. The names of the attending physicians were kept secret at the York hospital.

The facts about the unusual separation and the plastic operation afterward were made public by the medical information bureau of the New York Academy of Medicine.

Girl 'Siamese' Twins Also Parted After 1 Died

Joined at the abdomen by a "pouch"—band of tissue—four inches in diameter, the two were severed six weeks after birth. Dr. Hillard Holmes, Glencoe, said no common blood stream united the sisters.

Schumann-Heink Left Only $35,000

Los Angeles, Nov. 25 (INS)—The million-dollar fortune amassed by Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, famous contralto, shrank largely as a result of philanthropy to approximately $35,000, it was revealed today in the will filed for probate.

The major portion of the estate was bequeathed to her five children, the noted diva's medals, diplomas and other mementos going to the Smithsonian Institution.

Hunt Plane With 14 Off Alaskan Coast

Cordova, Alaska, Nov. 25 (AP)—The Coast Guard patrol boat Morris searched along the Gulf of Alaska coast today for a tri-motored plane and its 14 occupants, unreported on a 500-mile flight to Juneau. Rainstorms and poor visibility kept searching planes grounded.

The Morris wirelessed from 45 miles off Cape Yakataga that it was encountering rough seas, wind and rain.

REBELS TO DEFY POWERS, BOMB BARCELONA

By THOMAS A. LOAYZA

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Madrid, Nov. 25—Rebel leaders again ignoring demands of Britain and other neutral European powers that safety of foreign shipping be guaranteed, today rushed plans for the bombardment of Barcelona and the temporary loyalist capital, Valencia.

The insurgent radio at Teneriffe announced that naval assaults on the two ports were "imminent."

Under a double barrage of rebel shells and American criticism, preparations for evacuation of the United States embassy, probably tomorrow, were nearly completed today.

Forty-three Americans, eight Costa Ricans, and 17 Filipinos—36 men, 24 women, and eight children—have already signed up for the American taxicab and bus convoy that will dash to Valencia.

Nearly 100 Americans, who feel it is their duty to remain in the capital, criticized orders from Washington to evacuate.

Eric C. Wendelin, charge d'affaires, said he had opposed removal, but was left no choice.

A majority of those remaining here will be lodged in the embassy building. Some others, however, have chosen to seek the protection of the British embassy.

British Fleet All Set to Safeguard Shipping

London, Nov. 25 (AP)—With warships and submarines, Great Britain backed up an official pledge today she would not allow either side in the Spanish civil war to interfere with her merchant ships.

Just how close to the Spanish coast the submarine depot ship Cyclops and eight undersea craft would go from their Malta base was not definitely determined. Informed quarters recognized the government was taking a more serious view of Fascist threats to blockade Barcelona than officials cared to admit.

French Warships to "Protect Commerce"

Paris, Nov. 25 (AP)—French warships in the western Mediterranean carried orders today to provide full protection for the nation's merchant marine on the high seas.

The naval ministry dispatched instructions putting into force the government's decision to oppose any interference with French shipping by Spanish men-of-war outside territorial waters.

Lynn Girl Missing After WPA Gossip

Stalin Pens New Soviet Basic Law

Moscow, Nov. 25 (AP)—Joseph Stalin, termed by some Russians the "beloved leader of hundreds of millions of foreign toilers oppressed by capitalism," presented a proposed new constitution to his countrymen today.

Convocation ceremonies were planned to include the second public speech in history by Stalin, who officially is secretary-general of the Communist party.

The constitution, Soviet leaders predicted, will serve as an "incomparable Socialistic weapon for agitation and propaganda" because of its "liberalizing" effect on Russian life.

MAY SECEDE AT WILL

Stalin is said to have written it himself. As drafted, it is described as an advanced, enlightened document promising many new liberties and privileges to Russian citizens. It is written so that additional states may join the U. S. S. R. when they choose.

The constitution also provides that these states or other states may secede from the union.

The highest post under the new document is that of chairman of the presidium of the supreme council. The group is composed of 37 members and is planned to enjoy great power as a governing body when the supreme council—or parliament—is not in session.

WHAT IT PROVIDES

The right to work, leisure, material security in old age, education, equal rights for women, universal equality of citizenry, freedom of conscience and the right to worship, freedom of speech, press, assembly and meetings, the right to organize into any group except political bodies, freedom from arrest except for law violations, inviolability of homes, and the right of asylum to foreign citizens "persecuted for defending the interests of the toilers or for their scientific activity or for their struggle for national liberation."

Equal suffrage, the secret direct ballot and the right to vote and hold office for all persons more than 18 years old are provided.

The supreme crimes under the new constitution are "treason, violation of oath, desertion to the enemy, impairing the military might of the state or espionage for a foreign state." The penalty for these is death.

'PROTEGE' GETS $0 VERDICT IN BIG SUIT

Springfield, Nov. 25—It took a Hampden County jury just 25 minutes today to decide that "Song and Gag Man" Morris Humphrey ought to collect exactly nothing from Gertrude Greeley Whiting.

The suit, in which the 42-year-old dancer, band-leader, and onetime master of ceremonies sought to secure $100,000 in damages on a "broken contract" went to the 12 good men and true this morning. Judge James Donnelly had admonished the jury to "use common sense."

Humphrey had testified that he quit night club life and divorced his wife to study music under Mrs. Whiting's direction in Europe and that she had promised him $100 a week for life if he did.

Mrs. Jessie Brown, nurse of the 57-year-old widow, testified that Humphrey played "the ardent lover" to Mrs. Whiting, but didn't show many signs of studying music. The evidence took only two days, although the suit has been under way for four years.

Humphrey said he would ask his attorneys to seek a new trial. Meanwhile, he added, he would attempt to find work in Springfield night clubs.

public hearing scheduled to consider objections of the Massachusetts Medical Society would not be held.

"Dr. Charles E. Mongan and I find ourselves in agreement on the matter (of appointing Dr. Overholser's successor)," the governor stated.

"Both are extremely anxious to establish the highest of possible standards for the care and treatment of the mentally ill."

Governor Curley said that the only question was one of seeking the proper man to head the state mental diseases department and that Dr. Mongan, president of the state medical society, felt the same way.

Only one person in the council chamber objected. That was Henry Atkinson, of the Massachusetts Civic League, who said:

"I represent the Massachusetts Civic League and our organization objects to the appointment of Dr. Williams. Our organization wants a public hearing."

The governor told him he should advise the league to submit its objection and request in writing.

The governor, before officially dropping the matter of the mental diseases department appointment, read a letter from the Massachusetts Medical Society in which it was made clear that the society wanted to discuss the matter privately with him.

DUEL Champ's Own STORY

SORRY FOE WASN'T SLAIN

Budapest, Nov. 25 (INS)—Dr. Franz Sargas, Hungary's marathon duelist, still has seven more affairs d'honneur to get off his broad chest and yet another eight challenges pending, but the outcome of the first two clashes indicates that the chivalrous doctor has a long life ahead of him.

An apology was the result of the first; a light pistol wound in the right arm of his adversary the finale of the other, both chalked up as victories for the honor of the doctor who fought because of money-marriage charges.

Dr. Sargas was elated, although slightly irritated over further delays today, caused by difficulties with his opponents' seconds over the time, place and manner that the next duels should have.

One more pistol duel and six saber-swinging bouts are on the schedule, Dr. Sargas hoping to complete the pistol affair first, then run off the saber battles quickly.

His Own Story

Telling of the first two, Dr. Sargas said:

"My first opponent was Dr. Ladar Hosmetz of the Bank of Hungary. We stood at a distance of 15 paces, while our seconds searched us for pocketbooks, cigarette cases, and other articles likely to deflect bullets.

"I felt very calm. I really had no intention of hurting this opponent, because he was guilty of only a slight offense against my wife and myself.

"After we both missed, Dr. Hosmetz came and said, 'I apologize. Let us be good friends again.' I embraced him and we warmly shook hands.

"He dropped back into the darkness and out stepped my second adversary, Dr. Alexander Kovacs, also a bank employe.

"Kovacs was one of my very serious enemies. He probably hates me, because he was one in love with my wife when she was still a girl.

Wife Sobs Happily

"My first shot hit him. He is a left-handed man and the bullet seemed to hit him in the knuckles of his pistol hand, then bury itself in his arm. He cried out and stumbled, while his surgeon rushed to him. We all jumped into our cars and rushed away, for the shooting was attracting a crowd.

"I wish I had killed Kovacs. I'm sorry I didn't succeed."

Mme. Magda Sargas, his blonde young wife, revealed that she learned of the intended duels only through the newspapers.

When her husband was about to leave for the first affairs, she said:

"I cried and rushed after him in a last attempt to stop him.

"I took medicine to calm my nerves and smoked endless cigarettes. But at last my husband ran in to tell me he was unhurt."

Parted by Court, Trailer Husband, Wife in Tears

Northampton, Mass., Nov. 25 (AP)—Bidding each other a tearful farewell, Frank Gordert, 35, of Columbus, Ohio, and his wife Helen, who traveled harmoniously in an auto trailer with another "wife" and three children, were led toward separate fates today by Connecticut and Massachusetts State police.

Gordert agreed to waive extradition and was taken to Farmington, Conn., by two Connecticut troopers who said he would face a morals charge with his common law wife, Esther Fontaine, 23, mother, Gordert said, of his three weeks old child.

Gordert's chic 27-year-old legal wife embraced him and then hugged three-year-old Jimmy, admitted by the couple to be the son of Gordert by his common-law wife. A Massachusetts trooper took her toward Westfield, Mass., where she will be charged with obtaining money under false pretenses.

Gordert took Jimmy with him.

Be They 2 or 82 They Offer Bountiful Thanks

LAND'S SAKE, says 82-year-old Mrs. Mary McAllister, the reason a lot of people don't get into the proper Thanksgiving Day spirit is because they don't realize what a lot of things there are in the world to be thankful for. Take Mrs. McAllister, who's sort of cooped up in the Cambridge Home for the Aged. "I'm comfortable here, and I have a good digestion, and I've had a good life. Isn't that something?"

DINNER FOR FIVE—and turkey, too! Even if it isn't Thanksgiving Day on Canada's calendar, it's a day for the Dionne quintuplets to be mighty thankful. So they are. They're hungry, anyhow. Just look at the way they're getting primed to tackle the roasted bird on the table! Yvonne (right) seems to be still wrestling with her caviar—if that's what it is—while next-door neighbor Marie peeks. Emilie is polishing off the soup course, while Cecile insists on having her Russian dressing on the salad before it's time for it. Annette is just an innocent bystander, but she's probably wondering when she'll get the bird. Nurse Noel, on the left, isn't as busy as Nurse Leroux, on the right, but she's still plenty busy.

Mystery on World's Biggest Ranch, Two Missing

San Perlita, Tex., Nov. 25 (AP)—Disappearance of two hunters on the world's largest cattle ranch excited southern Texas today with a strange story of spectacular proportions.

Lee Blanton, 57, San Perlita farmer, and his son, Jon, 24, disappeared a week ago while on a hunting trip on the famed King ranch property.

At a mass meeting of 150 Willacy county residents last night, speakers declared the ranch would be entered by force unless permission were given or the men found.

Ranger Captain William McMurray said about 150 men gathered on the main street here today they had permission to make an orderly search for the missing men.

He asked that small groups go with officers to satisfy themselves everything possible was being done to find the men if they were on the million-acre ranch.

McMurray expressed the opinion the missing hunters had been "carried away" and would not be found on the ranch. He did not explain his remark.

Two men, one a Mexican and the other a game warden, have been arrested and jailed for investigation in the case, the Ranger captain disclosed. Their names were not disclosed.

The Blantons made their home on a farm three miles north of San Perlita. The Blantons disappeared last Wednesday when they walked some 500 yards to a lagoon to hunt ducks. The lagoon was on ranch property.

Santiago Suarez, Mexican consul in Brownsville, has asked rangers to seek an explanation of the disappearance last February of Jesus Rivera, Mexican citizen, and a companion, Reyes Ramirez, while hunting in the same coastal area.

Hunt 14 Missing In Alaska Plane

Cordova, Alaska, Nov. 25 (AP)—An aerial search was ordered today for 14 people missing in a tri-motored plane on a flight across the stormy Gulf of Alaska.

Hope that the plane safely crossed the gulf in a 200-mile flight from Cordova to Juneau was strengthened by a report from the weather observer at Yakutat that he had seen a large southbound plane at noon yesterday. Yakutat is 220 miles north of Juneau.

Court Sentences Two Juveniles

Attempted holdups by two 16-year-old members of an Everett robbery "gang," a boy and a girl, brought them indeterminate sentences today in Malden juvenile court.

The boy was sentenced to the Shirley School, the girl to the Lancaster School for Girls. They were charged with conspiracy to rob two persons in Malden and carrying guns.

Blacklist Laid To Five Distillers

Washington, Nov. 25 (INS)—The federal trade commission today accused five major distilleries of fixing liquor prices by "unlawful agreements" with distributors to "blacklist" and cut off supplies of price-cutting retailers. Seven trade associations also were charged with coercion and threats of a boycott to maintain the price policies.

HOW NOT TO CARVE

Festive Bird Tomorrow

Three men on a turkey.

Three men alive today going about their business decently, home tonight to read a good book, to put out the lynx-eyed cat and then to bed after brushing their teeth with a quick, upward movement.

But tomorrow they will be on a turkey. Tomorrow it will be a culinary hack-sack. Out of the sack comes a meaty bird and three men on a turkey become hacks.

Hacking a turkey is not carving a turkey. To plunge, to smear, to perspire, is not carving.

And if you growl, when the family surrounds the platter (or mumble heh-heh because folks are visiting from Hot Springs, Ark.) you are not only a culinary hack-sack but a Thanksgiving stuffed-shirt.

NO. 1 A SLICKER

Number One—at a given signal—rises from the living room group, murmurs vaguely, and disappears into the murk of the kitchen.

He takes off coat and tie, rolls up sleeves, grabs the steaming bird with a towel and slams it on the table.

The wife keeps water running in the sink or has Uncle Sinbad step up the radio to drown out thumping noises in the kitchen.

Number One leers and cackles to himself. Nobody sees him slithering the carcass all over the kitchen table.

Freshly attired he returns to the living room and tells his guests he was checking up on ice cubes.

"I guess I'll go out and cut the turkey."

He goes out. He comes back in five minutes, looking calm and purposeful. The turkey is brought in on platters, conquered and well-dressed. The guests are baffled.

NO. 2 METHOD

Number Two squats down in his chair, smiles at his audience. The bird is brought in to him. He picks up the knife and gloats over it as if it were a Russian sabre.

He sharpens it, runs a finger over its edge to make the ladies squeamish. He pokes a fork into the bird as if it were a mammoth pin cushion. Now he raises the knife.

Then he puts everything down and says:

If the bird rises from the table because his fork batted it to the floor, he reaches down and slams it back on the home platter. He Plays the Game, consequences notwithstanding.

Although a chauffeur was seen carrying a suitcase from his rooms at 22 Plympton street, the son of the President indicated he would make the drive alone.

$1,000,000 Fire

Monterey, Cal., Nov. 25 (AP)—Fire destroyed the Delmar Canning Company sardine plant here today with a loss estimated by officials at between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000.

Go and Get It

A Thanksgiving duck dinner awaited someone on the ice of Flax Pond in Lynn today—if they have the courage to go and get it.

The bird's feet became frozen in the ice and Fred T. Vickers, agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, shot it after he had been unsuccessful in efforts to shoot away the ice encasing its feet.

The ice was too thin, however, to enable Vickers to reach it, so he left the bird there.

WPA to Cut 5000 Off Relief Rolls

More than 500 Works Progress Administration workers will be cut off the relief rolls within the next 30 days, the Boston Evening American learned today.

This announcement came on the heels of a drastic slash yesterday in the administrative force of the State WPA, which removed 200 unit leaders from office.

Two prominent administrative heads are to be discharged Friday by State Administrator Paul Edwards, his last official act before taking over his Washington post as chief WPA examiner. Edwards refused to divulge the names of the two directors until after they had been notified.

Many hundreds now on relief, investigators point out, have members of their families working, which automatically discharges the government from the duty of support.

Holiday

Staunton, Va., Nov. 25 (AP)—Thanksgiving Turkey Cranberry Sauce Pennypacker Breckenridge, Negro charged with stealing meat from a farmer, told the Augusta county circuit court the attending physician gave him the first two names because he was born on Thanksgiving Day 20 years ago, and his mother added the trimmings.

The judge contributed 18 months.

Truckman Saved From River Death

Edward Connors, 22, of Canton street, Sharon, might have been drowned today if it had not been for the quick wit and courage of Edward L. Bunker of Josephine street, Dorchester.

Connors was backing a truck with a load of fill for the property at Lowell and Nashua streets, West End. A banking collapsed. Connors leaped, but the door of his machine cab slammed.

Bunker, standing close by, grabbed Connors' arm and hung on while the truck hurtled, end over end, into the Charles river

WALLY Plans Winter IN TYROL

REPORT KING WILL JOIN HER

(Copyright, 1936, by International News Service.)

London, Nov. 25 (INS)—Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson of Baltimore is contemplating a visit in the near future to Kitzbuhl, Austria, it was learned today.

Mrs. Simpson was a guest at Kitzbuhl two years ago as a member of a distinguished party which occupied all the floors of the resort's leading hotel.

King Edward joined the party before the stay was over and spent a great deal of time in sightseeing in the Austrian Alps in the company of Mrs. Simpson.

Mrs. Simpson altered earlier plans for visits to Bermuda or the Riviera owing chiefly to widespread publicity accorded her intentions, but she believes the Austrian Tyrol is sufficiently isolated for her to escape the limelight.

King to Follow

The report of Mrs. Simpson's plans states King Edward might follow her to Austria at some later date. She intends to make the trip in January.

Close friends of Mrs. Simpson stated today she is becoming increasingly distressed by the publicity attending her romance with the king.

Her distress, close friends said, is caused chiefly by King Edward's reaction to widespread publicity of their activities, fearing he might be upset by the world interest aroused by their romance.

The king, it was learned, dined at Buckingham Palace last night and was later joined by Mrs. Simpson, to whom he presented a gift of a quantity of priceless linen and glassware from the palace store for her household use.

Meanwhile Mrs. Simpson's London dressmaker went to Paris during the week-end to study Mainbocher's collections, where a number of gowns are being made for the King's prospective bride.

Hyde Park Man Heart Victim

A heart attack was given as the cause today for the death of 74-year-old Emile E. Pulster, of Hyde Park avenue, Hyde Park, who collapsed while shoveling snow in front of his house.

MAYOR URGES U. S. TO HALT SHIP ROW

Seeking to ward off trouble before it assumes major proportions, Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield today appealed to Secretary of Labor Frances E. Perkins for governmental aid in "ironing out" the shipping strike here.

At the same time, Boston strike leaders were reported summoned to Washington to participate in a conference there today.

Mayor Mansfield expressed fear that if the labor department fails to step into the situation, already confused, a general tie-up of all shipping in the harbor was in the offing.

Edward L. Rogers, business agent of the engineers' association and Captain Dennis McCarthy, of the licensed engineers' group, were sent to the conference in the capital.

With insurgent members of the International Seamen's Union, the strikers hired a boat equipped with a loudspeaker to tour the harbor and appeal to the crews of all ships to walkout.

Striking Unions to Man Food Ships for Alaska

San Francisco, Nov. 25 (AP)—Federal officials had a verbal promise today from striking unions to man food ships for Alaska, acutely affected by the widespread maritime tieup.

Hawaii, also cut off from normal supplies of mainland necessities, still was without a promise of aid.

1000 Officers, Engineers Join N. Y. Ship Strikers

New York, Nov. 25 (INS)—Nearly a thousand shop officers and engineers were out on strike here today, adding strength to the walkout of insurgent members of the International Seamen's Union.

Social Security Act:

Pensions Based On Life Wages

Today, as nearly 1,000,000 social security account number application blanks went out to employes in the Boston postal district, employers and employes still were vexed by some of the problems raised by the law. Follow this series in the Boston Evening American if you want to know what the law means to you, whether you are employer or employe.

Workers in Boston, more than half a million of them, from executives to office boys, today were filling out their applications for account numbers under the social security act.

Each worker was making out a card that would enable the government to identify him throughout his working life.

In other words, no matter where the worker goes or what he does the information he gives on the card issued to him as an application blank allows the government to keep track of him and credit any wages he may earn between January 1 and the time he retires under pension.

Pensions are based on lifetime earnings. For example, if one should earn $26,000 through the years after January 1, bearing in mind that one can receive credit for only $3000 in any one year, one's pension would amount to approximately $34 a month.

Suppose one earns $150 a month and is 30 years old. By the time he is ready to retire he will have earned $62,100.

Now, the Federal government allows a monthly benefit equalling one-half of one per cent of the first $3000, plus one-twelfth of one per cent of the next $42,000, plus one twenty-fourth of one per cent of the final $17,100. Hence such a pension would amount to $57.12 a month.

Way Over Barrier

Many persons who do not come under the act, are not taxed, and do not share in the pension possibilities, began to seek ways of obtaining personal advantages under the law.

Some owners of small businesses, with few employes, took steps to incorporate. This enabled them to register as employes of a corporation, and so become eligible for the benefits under the act.

A business man, operating his own business, no matter how small it may be, is reckoned an employer, not an employe. His business may not be netting him any more money than his employes are getting, but while they pay taxes on their wages and are credited with them, his money does not count toward a pension.

Hence many a small business man, by incorporation, is enabled to work for himself, technically as both employer and employe, and allows his wages to accumulate to his credit with the social security board toward a pension.

A concerted drive was on foot to register workers who are now jobless, but who may go to work soon.

While there is no procedure to care for persons who are not now employed, the social security board is urging jobless men and women to register with the board. They can secure the necessary blanks from their nearest postoffice.

Like employed workers, they will receive account numbers, and will have ledgers made out for them by the government. When they go to work, their ledgers will show that fact, and their wages will begin to pile up toward a pension without further effort on their part.

Follow this series of articles on the Social Security Act in the Boston Evening American. If you have any individual problems concerning the act, address them to the Social Security Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Square.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Following are some of the questions asked about the Social Security Act by Boston Evening American readers. If you have any questions of your own, address them to the Social Security Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square.

Q.—My father and I are in business together, and we do not hire any help. Do we have to fill out a blank, in case we should have to hire help in the future?

A.—No, you do not. If you should hire anyone later on, you can fill the blank out then. Blanks will be supplied to you on the asking by your nearest postoffice.

Q.—Will you please answer this question in your column. I am a registered nurse, doing private work. Am I exempt from the social security act, or do I comply with its provisions?

A.—Since you work independently, you are considered a private and independent contractor, and so do not come under the social security act.

Q.—I will be 70 years old on the 27th of December, and am still working for a public utility company. Do I come under the act?

A.—You do not come under the act. Your wages will not be taxed, and you will not be eligible for any benefits under the act. Should you be out of a job and in need, you could receive old age assistance through your nearest public welfare office.

Q.—What is the status of skilled workers such as carpenters, masons, bricklayers, etc., who are employed for only short periods at a time by contractors, and in between jobs have no employment at all? My husband has little steady employment on any one job, and consequently is constantly changing employment. Does he have to make a report on every change?

A.—No, the act and its administration are so arranged that it is the employer's responsibility to report the men who work for him. They do not have to do it themselves. Your husband fills out one application, and receives one account number. This number stays with him, and his changes of jobs are noted on his ledger. The social security board suggests that employes keep track of the jobs they hold and the wages paid them, but this is not compulsory.

MANY PENSION BLANKS FAULTY

Social Security executives here, examining some few hundreds of the thousands upon thousands of incoming cards, found many of them faulty.

The persons who made mistakes in filling out the forms may have to try again if the errors were important.

But if you are still puzzling over your own blank, here's some advice based on results to date:

Don't neglect to give the full names of your parents, including the full maiden name of your mother.

This is necessary if Uncle Sam is to differentiate between all the John Smiths and George Browns and Bill Joneses that fill the directories.

It wouldn't do to wait until you were 65—and then find some other fellow with a name like yours drawing your pension.

That brings us to another thing. Remember to specify, if you can, the county of your birth as well as the town or city and the state.

In many states, county records are better kept than any others. So give the Social Security statisticians a lift.

Don't lie about your age. That's a shortsighted fraud which will catch up with you, in the long run.

3 More Sentenced In Sweep Fraud

Three more defendants indicted in the Montreal Post-Graduate Hospital Sweepstakes fraud pleaded guilty in Federal Court and were given suspended jail sentences today.

Frank Powers and Rosario Bellefouille, both of Holyoke, received two terms of three months each on counts of using the mails in a scheme to defraud and transportation of lottery matter interstate. V. David Leavio of New York city was sentenced to three months.

BUCKLEY GAINS 25,000 VOTES

Discrepancy of 25,000 votes between the day after election count for State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley and the official tabulation of the Governor's Council was disclosed today when the latter's report was made public.

The first report gave Buckley a margin of approximately 39,000. Today's tabulation showed he had won by 64,000 votes. Plurality of Francis E. Kelley over Leverett Saltonstall, for lieutenant-governor, was 10,093, according to the tabulation.

Plurality of 136,000 votes for Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., in his contest against Governor Curley for United States senator was recorded.

President Roosevelt received 942,616 votes, the highest vote ever accorded a presidential candidate in Massachusetts.

Harvard "Bares" Frolic in Snow

Lady Godiva had nothing on a certain group of Harvard students, it became evident early this morning when officials started their annual campaign against a number of collegiate "Polar Bare" clubs.

Students in several upperclassmen houses have resumed their snow-cavorting fun after midnight. Of course, they're modest about it, for although they leave their pajamas behind, they don't leave the enclosed courtyards of their different houses.

The clubs have grown since last year, and have spread to three houses.

ROOSEVELT HAS SPEECH READY

Aboard U. S. S. Chester, at Sea, Nov. 25 (INS)—Still more than 1200 miles from Rio De Janeiro, parties aboard the Indianapolis and Chester today reverted to navy routine after a riotous day in which President Roosevelt and other "Pollywogs," having crossed the equator, became full-fledged "Shellbacks."

The President is now rounding out the first of his South American good-will speeches, which is slated for delivery Friday at a joint session of the Houses of the Brazilian Congress at Rio.

The Indianapolis will steam up the Plata Estuary to Buenos Aires November 30, and the President, on December 2, will leave the city of the Pan-American peace conference.

Buenos Aires, Nov. 25 (AP)—United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull reached Buenos Aires today, bringing completed drafts of proposed neutrality and cultural exchange conventions for presentation at next month's inter-American conference.

SHEEHAN PICKS 7 FOR NEW RAID SQUAD

Collins and Michael J. Kane, who aided Captain Sheehan in driving illicit gambling enterprises out of the Roxbury Crossing district.

The officer called to join the new squad from Dorchester is Patrolman William J. Hartigan of Station 11, Fields Corner. Hartigan's appointment was a surprise, but, like the others, he has served under Captain Sheehan in the past.

All were summoned to report to headquarters immediately to start work this afternoon. A radio flash was sent out for Sgt. Condon, who was in a cruising car working on a case.

CURLEY SOUNDS COUNCIL

Meanwhile, Governor Curley, back at his office after his two weeks' illness, was holding conferences behind closed doors, preparatory to asking the executive council to confirm removal of McSweeney, it was understood.

The Governor, according to reports, did not intend to move for the police head's ouster unless a private poll of the councillors proved he had sufficient votes against McSweeney.

He needed one more vote than he was able to count on the last time he polled the members privately, it was said.

Major Joseph F. Timilty, the Governor's aide, was reported to be the leading candidate for McSweeney's post, if the commissioner is ousted.

WIRES TO COUNCIL

Another strong possibility is Adjutant-General William I. Rose, who, although for years a resident of Worcester, is said to have established residence in Boston since Governor Curley appointed him to his present position.

Deputy Police Superintendent James R. Claflin was also being mentioned. In some quarters the names of Maurice J. Tobin and Joseph J. Mulhern were also heard.

At police headquarters Frank A. East, president of the West Roxbury Board of Trade, showed a copy of a telegram he had sent to members of the Governor's Council in support of Commissioner McSweeney. East, a prominent druggist, said he also represented the Roslindale and West Roxbury Kiwanis Club.

The telegram read:

"In the name of common decency and respect for the citizens of Boston, we urge you to protest and vote against the removal of Police Commissioner McSweeney."

The following statement was issued by George W. Gardner, commander of the Boston Police Post of the American Legion:

"Members of Boston Police Post American Legion, 251, protest strenuously any attempt designed toward the removal of Commissioner Eugenee M. McSweeney. We not only hold Commissioner McSweeney in the highest esteem but urge strongly his retention in office on the strength of his outstanding record and accomplishments. Boston is fortunate in having a police commissioner of such high calibre as Mr. McSweeney."

GUN GANG DEFIANT

This robbery, the latest in a long series of holdups which brought the horse rooms and number pool operators into the spotlight, occurred only an hour after Captain Sheehan was elevated to be acting inspector of divisions, yesterday.

The holdup took place in Charlestown where 41 bettors were lined against the walls, at gunpoint, to watch the gunmen take $2000 from the cash drawer.

The betting room invaded by the machine-gun gang is situated between City square and Thompson square and it was jammed with customers when the bandits appeared yesterday as the first race at Bowie was being run.

Pushing their way past the doorman, masked and handling their guns easily and professionally, they lined up every individual in the smoke-filled room. Two barked orders to "pass over" the money at once. The eight others collected.

CLUBS STILL OPEN

Many of the persons lined up were said to be victims of other raids in Boston and had gone to Charlestown in the belief that there was a "lull" in the activities of the gang and that this place would not be molested.

Many of the night clubs in town which have been openly violating the law by keeping open after hours, last night took advantage of the fact that the "police pressure" does not get underway until today.

They kept open into the morning hours and charged double for whatever liquor was served.

Local operators of horse race rooms and number pool establishments in downtown sections and outlying sections of the city, it was learned, were planning to move equipment to surrounding cities and towns—all within not too long motoring distance.

Where Death Rode the Rails

PROBE 'L' CRASH IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Nov. 25 (AP)—The worst elevated train wreck in Chicago history left nine dead and at least 65 in hospitals today. Little hope was held for the recovery of two other victims.

The victims were trapped in a wooden coach, the last of an eight-car Chicago elevated line express train.

The elevated was struck on a span 20 feet above street level by a 90,000-pound steel car of the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee Railroad, which uses the elevated right of way in the city limits.

Key figure of the investigations was Van H. Grooms, 36, motorman of the North Shore train. Injured himself, and "in an overwrought mental condition," doctors said, Grooms was in technical custody.

Deputy Coroner James J. Whalen, who obtained the only statement from the distraught railroad man, quoted Grooms as saying:

"The lights on the 'L' train were so dim I couldn't see them until I saw the car itself. I put on my brakes, but it was too late to stop."

Body of One Ship Victim Sighted

New Orleans, Nov. 25 (AP)—One seared body floated to the surface today in water filled hold No. 2 of the S.S. Scantic, which was ravaged by fire last night while in dry dock here for repairs.

The identity of the victim could not be established until the water was pumped out of the hold and the body removed.

Finding of the body led rescue workers to believe that nine missing workmen had perished in the fire.

Bethlehem Only Drydock Bidder

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—The Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., of New York City, with six alternate proposals ranging from $16,804,000 to $21,312,000, was the sole bidder today on the construction of the navy's new floating drydock at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, designed to be the world's largest.

The drydock, 1016 feet long, will accommodate any naval vessel, including the aircraft carriers Lexington and Saratoga. The navy specified it should be built on the Pacific coast.

Mystery Munitions

Marseille, France, Nov. 25 (AP)—French guards stood watch today over 15 truckloads of uncharged shells and air bombs while police sought to solve the mystery of the munitions' destination.

Overpass 'Gift' Charge Sifted

Attorney-General Paul A. Dever announced today that he would study a report charging a $69,000 state "gift" in construction of the Jamaicaway overpass and would render a formal opinion on the matter the first of next week.

The charges were made against the state department of public works by the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers' Associations. Commissioner William F. Callahan immediately denied any irregularities.

But the federation, through its president, Reginald W. Bird, asserted that the $69,000 payment was made to the contracting firm of Coleman Brothers Corporation for use of red granite as a substitute for buff granite on the Jamaicaway overpass and two bridges over Muddy river.

It charges that the state paid $2.50 and $9.25 per square foot for red granite, while the contractor had bid $1.05 and $4.05, respectively, for the granite items. Fourteen contractors had made bids averaging $1.23 and $5.19.

Commissioner Callahan said that the substitution of red granite for buff granite was made on "insistent demands" by Park Commissioner William P. Long and Architect Arthur A. Shurcliffe.

He said they wanted the overpass and the two small bridges to harmonize with other structures in the Fens.

Probe $5000 Fire

State Fire Inspector John Riordan today began investigation of a blaze which did damage of $5000 in an auto accessory and tire shop in Newcombe square, Quincy.

ESCAPES FROM POLICE CAR

En route to Deer Island House of Correction, James F. Sullivan, 32, of Charlestown, leaped out of a police car today and escaped.

Sullivan, who, coincidentally, lives in Sullivan street, was due to serve two months.

He was in the custody of Court Officer James A. Cuniffe. Another prisoner in the wagon didn't try to leave despite the confusion.

The escape took place as the police car halted in traffic while fire engines responded to an alarm at Commercial and Prince streets, North End.

Ex-British Officer Faces New Charges

Gloucester, Nov. 25—Captain Leonard E. Best, former British army officer of this town who was arrested in Newy York last week a few minutes before the Queen Mary sailed for England, faced new charges today.

Already under arrest for larceny of $6226 from a local department store owner, Best was served a warrant today charging him with additional larcenies amounting to $6200. Best had previously pleaded not guilty to the first charge and was held in $10,000.

Dorchester Delay In El Signal Jam

Signal trouble on the Boston Elevated rapid transit at Harrison square, Dorchester, outside Fields Corner station, delayed thousands of work-bound passengers for 15 minutes this morning as trains were tied up between stations.

ASQUITH KIN ADMINISTRATOR

Lewis F. Griffin, of Brooklyn, N. Y., brother of the slain Mrs. Grayce Asquith, of Weymouth, victim of New England's strangest torso murder, was today appointed administrator of his sister's estate by Judge Joseph R. McCoole in Norfolk Probate Court, sitting in Brookline.

Petition of Griffin, presented as sole heir and next of kin, was granted following a bench conference.

Oscar Bartolini, Quincy handyman who often did errands for the dead woman, is being held on charges of the murder while intensive search continues for the missing John A. Lyons, feared to be a second victim.

The severed legs of Mrs. Asquith were discovered in Boston Harbor, off Governor's Island, on October 5, while the head was recovered on the 23rd by divers in the Fort Point Channel.

Torrey, McLean Lead in Beverly

Beverly, Nov. 25—Present Mayor James A. Torrey and former Alderman Daniel E. McLean won mayoralty nominations here, leading a field of five candidates, tabulation of primary election returns showed today.

The vote was light, less than 50 per cent of registered citizens casting their ballots.

BUSINESS AIDS MAIL CRUSH

With a record volume of Christmas mail in prospect, Boston businessmen were pledged today to collaborate in special measures with Acting Postmaster Peter F. Tague. Meeting at the Chamber of Commerce, representatives of more than 100 leading firms of the city's greatest business establishments agreed to use an easily distinguishable type of envelope for business communications during the holiday period.

The business men also promised to avoid cluttering the holiday mail with circulars and advertisements.

"This was a busy day in Plymouth town. For some did shoulder their matchlocks and scour the woods from whence they brought a goodly store of venison and wild fowl. Others, with their fishing tackle, brought us of the best of the sea and brooks, so we had no lack of meat. . . ."

Today, any one of a dozen food stores in your community offers you the ingredients of a complete Thanksgiving dinner. Indeed, you may "shoulder your matchlock" by telephone and your feast will be delivered at your door.

Boston's Thanksgiving requirements today call for more than a half-million turkeys. And it is not uncommon to find weekly receipts of western beef in the city totalling 3,000,000 pounds. Throughout Greater Boston 8,123 food stores offer delicacies from every corner of the earth. This amazing network of food distribution functions so smoothly that whether your requirements be a pound of coffee or supplies to provide 80,000 meals a day in a chain of restaurants, your order arrives on schedule.

LOUELLA PARSONS—NEW FILMS—DRAMA NOTES

Fred Allen Returns To Hollywood

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Nov. 25—Fred Allen, popular air comic, is returning to Hollywood. After "Thanks a Million," in which Allen was such a definite hit, Darryl Zanuck offered him everything but the new administration building on the 20th Century-Fox lot.

Fred said no, he didn't reckon as how he cared for the movies—he liked radio better. But Zanuck is nothing if not determined, so he has finally snared Allen and his wife, Portland Hoffa, on long term contracts.

Louella Parsons

The first Allen picture will be "Town Hall To-night," same as his radio sketch. Of course, it's to be a musical with Allen his own inimitable self. Maybe the movies have won him but he won't give up the radio—he likes it too well.

* * *

Frances Farmer could write her own ticket after 'Come and Get It' and she has written it with RKO as her next address. She'll appear again with Edward Arnold and this time it's to be "The Robber Barons," with Frances playing Josie Mansfield, an early American gold digger.

It's a great cast, too, that Edward Small is assembling for this colorful drama of the days when the Goulds and Vanderbilts were laying the foundations for their tremendous fortunes. Cary Grant and Jack Oakie have important roles with Al Hall directing—all borrowed from Paramount.

The unfavorable press notices given Leslie Howard by the New York critics for his Hamlet may result in his returning to Warner Brothers sooner than he originally intended. No performance in years has been treated as badly as his Hamlet and Leslie isn't used to such adverse criticism.

A little bit of gossip from New York says that Leslie would be interested in playing Dreyfus in "I Accuse." Paul Muni is set as Emile Zola, the novelist, and the picture would give both an equal break. What a cast—Muni and Howard! I vote the straight ticket for it.

* * *

My faith in the American public has been restored. I couldn't feel that Hollywood's reluctance to see "Romeo and Juliet" after the sad death of Irving Thalberg was any fair estimate of the picture's business in other cities.

Well, London has fallen for Norma Shearer's Juliet and the picture is now in its fourth week. New Haven's gross has topped "The Great Ziegfeld" and six other important cities are giving it record business—topping "Ziegfeld." So we can now feel that fine productions are not in vain.

* * *

St. Moritz will look like Hollywood at Christmas time. The Douglas Fairbanks, Kay Francis, Delmar Daves, Virginia Bruce, Merle Oberon have already signified their intentions of spending the holidays at the winter resort. And now Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lukas, Virginia Valli and Mrs. Charles Butterworth will leave here the 7th of December heading straight for Switzerland.

Daisy and Paul, by the way, received word that their application for American citizenship has been approved and were so thrilled that they staged a celebration in Palm Springs. While in Europe, Paul will look into several film offers, among them one from S. S. Film Productions to star in "The White Flame."

* * *

A line or two: The report that Bill Powell left the cast of "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" when Myrna Loy did, is erroneous. Bill remains in the picture in the swell role of the crook, along with Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery, the straight leads . . . Beulah Bondi is certainly the most important and popular character woman since Marie Dressler, and now that Paramount has signed her on a long term contract she will come into the stardom she so richly deserves in "Years Are So Long."

Victor Moore gets the lead opposite her in the first serious role he's ever played. Also the first non-comedy picture directed by Leo McCarey . . . What a welcome for Bette Davis her first day on the Warner Brothers lot. Her dressing room was jammed with flowers and everybody dropped by to say "Hello" . . . James Ellison has been bounding right along professionally since his big break as Buffalo Bill in "The Plainsman." He will be starred next year in a picture of that name by Harry Sherman who has been featuring Ellison in the "Hopalong Cassidy" series.

Snapshots of Hollywood

AL JOLSON called back from Palm Springs by RUBY KEELER'S illness. She was stricken with an attack of appendicitis. Rain for the first time in a year at the Springs kept ALICE MARBLE from playing her exhibition match; GOVERNOR LEHMAN of New York and SENATOR McADOO AND BRIDE in the Saturday night crowd at the Dunes; looked as if Hollywood has moved into Palm Springs with SONJA HENIE beaued by TYRONE POWER, ROBERT WOOLSEY, the HAL ROACHES, GEORGE BRENT, DIXIE DUNBAR and BILL DAVIS, her steady company.

RUTH SELWYN chatting with EDGAR, ARLINE JUDGE, LILI DAMITA, MITCHELL LEISEN, the RALPH BELLAMYS, and scores of others both at the Dunes and the Racquet Club; the NEXT MRS. LEW AYRES may be GRACE BRADLEY if their devotion at a certain night spot is any criterion; JACQUES CHACQUINEAN, New York man-about-town who resembles King Edward, signed on an RKO contract.

He and his socialite wife are landing in Hollywood for the season; JEAN ARTHUR and her husband, FRANK ROSS, the only guests at LA QUINTA, which is not open to the public yet—JEAN is resting there after a terrifically strenuous four months of picture making; MADGE EVANS entertaining for BESSIE LOVE who leaves for New York for an indefinite stay.

SPENCER TRACY lending his boat and the pride of his life to BILL POWELL for a short cruise before BILL starts work; CLARK GABLE and ROBERT TAYLOR on a week-end duck hunting trip; JOAN BENNETT will visit the Los Angeles Orphan Asylum taking each child a pair o' shoes and a toy for Thanksgiving.

That's all for today.
See you tomorrow!

'Dead End' Superbly Acted at Colonial

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Showy and stagey yet impressive, Sidney Kingsley's play, "Dead End," took the stage of the Colonial Theater last night and drilled home a lesson that many of the settlement houses will give an A-plus for good intent. Mr. Kingsley has it that a reform school is no place to school a hot-headed boy in punishment for a small crime of violence.

The playwright subordinates his preaching, fortunately, to his keen and theatrical sense of what constitutes entertainment. Against Norman Bel Geddes' justly famous setting of an East Side, New York, residential niche where wealth and poverty get in one another's hair, a dramatic series of incidents attend the return to his boyhood lair of one, "Babyface" Martin, a blood-letting hoodlum with eight or nine killings notched buoyantly on his pistol.

"Babyface" meets his doom for an exciting second-act curtain, but Mr. Kingsley makes his point about salvaging good young human material from the debris of the slums when he employs the reward paid by the government for "turning in" the killer to save the likeable young Tommy McGrath from his first imprisonment.

* * *

Dramatic moments are interspersed throughout the three acts, and one of the most poignant is the meeting of "Babyface" with his mother, whom he has traveled miles to see. The mother disowns him, slaps his face and listens to her son call her a vile name. She refuses his money and walks away from the scene. May Buckley plays Mrs. Martin, and this able veteran's exit drew applause at the premiere.

Joseph Downing, in his original role, plays "Babyface." His performance is convincing and startling. So is that of Arnold Shuroff, who plays the role of his bodyguard, one "Hunk."

The adult parts in "Dead End," and there are a score of more, are filled acceptably, but as in the New York company, the juveniles who people the group of kids created by the author, demand first attention.

As Tommy McGrath, Donald Sharpe catches the mood of his character splendidly. A courageous boy with an ability to fight and lead, this role wins an audience's sympathy in the hands of young Mr. Sharpe. As Tommy's sister, Drina, Mady Correll is exceptional. Your reviewer singles Miss Correll as something for the film scouts to see at least once again.

Ernest Rowan, familiar to Boston as a member these several years of Walter Hampden's touring repertory companies, is cast as the smug Mr. Griswald. He fits the role exactly.

Mr. Geddes' inspired creative urge is credited with complete supervision to the play as well as the designing of the single stage setting. The unique features of this scene have become familiar through the many raves given it since "Dead End" opened a year ago in New York.

* * *

The orchestra pit becomes the East river, under the Geddes' handling, and a tenement block abuts the rear entrance of a typically fashionable East Side apartment palace. When the history of the generation's work in the art of scene decor is written, the "Dead End" setting will be mentioned prominently.

As "Gimpty," Warren Ashe seemed perfect, and four youngsters named Jay Merrick, Morton Tuller, George Levinson and Edward Furman were highly effective in their characters as members of Tommy's gang. Marvin Himmel as "Milty" was good, too.

"Dead End" does not pall at any time, and it is as cleverly contrived as the playwright's earlier "Men in White."

At the Olympia

The Washington street Olympia is holding over through Friday "The Big Broadcast of 1937," Paramount musical with an all-star cast headed by Jack Benny, Martha Raye and Bob Burns, and "Ramona," color film of the famous California love idyll with Loretta Young and Paul Ameche in the leading roles.

HOLIDAY BILLS

As their contribution to the holiday gaiety, Keith Memorial is bringing the film version of Maxwell Anderson's dramatic stage play, "Winterset," and Loew's State and Orpheum, the light comedy, "Love on the Run," to their respective screens tomorrow, Thanksgiving Day.

The Pandro S. Berman production of "Winterset" will also have a 10 o'clock preview tonight, and "Love on the Run," a special midnight preview.

Burgess Meredith, Margo and Eduardo Ciannelli, who created the stage roles, are featured in "Winterset" and supporting players are John Carradine, Edward Ellis, Paul Guilfoyle, Maurice Moscovitch and Stanley Ridges.

* * *

"Love on the Run," co-starring Clark Gable and Joan Crawford, is adapted from the Alan Green and Julian Brodie story published this year in Cosmopolitan.

Featured players are Franchot Tone, Reginald Owen, Mona Barrie, Ivan Lebedeff, Charles Judels, William Demarest and Donald Meek.

* * *

Warner Baxter and June Lang of "The Road to Glory" fame are teamed again in "White Hunter," Twentieth Century-Fox production which opens at the Paramount and Fenway Theaters tomorrow.

The RKO Boston's Thanksgiving Day gift to its patrons is Eddie Cantor himself in person, back in Boston after a 7-year absence and bringing with him his entire gifted troupe.

The Cantor company is made up of the personnel of his Sunday night broadcasts, with Boston's own Parkyarkarkus, Greek dialectian, as the chief laughlure. Others are Jimmy Wallington, Jane Cooper, Deanna Durbin and another Boston favorite, Jacques Renard, who conducts the orchestra for the program and doubles as stooge.

* * *

At the Park Theater, "Virtue," starring Carol Lombard and Pat O'Brien, is featured on tomorrow's holiday bill, which also offers Peter B. Kyne's "A Face in the Fog," mystery thriller with Lloyd Hughes and June Collier.

For this week only, the new double-feature bill at the Scollay Square will open tomorrow and run for eight days. "Pigskin Parade," rollicking football picture, is the featured screen attraction. On the same bill will be Paramount's "Valiant is the Word for Carrie," starring Gladys George, who scored such a sensational success in last year's stage hit, "Personal Appearance."

* * *

Cause for additional thanksgiving, say those who have seen the picture, is the release of the Dionne quintuplets second starring picture, "Reunion," featuring Jean Hersholt, Rochelle Hudson and Robert Kent, which comes to the Metropolitan screen Friday. The footlight attraction will be Horace Heidt and his Brigadiers.

BOSTON after DARK

GEORGE HOLLAND

GEORGE HOLLAND

TOWNS IN NEW ENGLAND WHICH HAVEN'T SEEN a legitimate play in years (except stock) will have a look at "Boy Meets Girl" after it closes its Boston run at the Plymouth Saturday . . . Fitchburg and Pittsfield, and Newport, R. I., Concord and Keene, N. H., are on the itinerary . . . The show has been "wildcatted," that is, booked off the beaten path with dates and terms being arranged from day to day . . . When the dates have been completed, more than a dozen of the smaller communities will have been booked . . . Providence is the first "stand" after Boston, and even Providence hasn't seen a Broadway play in more than a year . . . Captain Cowan, the Providence censor, who is very strict indeed, will attend the Saturday matinee performance at the Plymouth to detect possible violations of his city's code for theatrical attractions . . . Speaking of Providence, the report is that Walter O'Hara, boss of Narragansett, is ready to bid for the control of Suffolk Downs . . . Governor-elect Charles F. Hurley will attend the annual supper dance on the evening before the Boston College-Holy Cross game at the Bradford Friday. It will be the first meeting of the governor-elect with his fellow-members of the Boston College alumni since the election . . . Governor Curley and Captain Sheehan, new "inspector of divisions," are not bosom-pals . . . A temperamental flare-up on both sides, Noel Cravat on one and Producer Norman Bel Geddes on the other, caused a last minute substitution in the imporant role of "Hunk" in "Dead End" for the important Boston premiere last night . . . Cravat was listed on the program, but did not play the part . . . Arnold Shuroff was summoned from New York to play "Hunk." He has understudied for a year without getting a chance to appear before an audience.

Staying in Character:

Hollywood is smiling over the efforts of Willie Hoppe, the billiard wizard, to teach the game to a famous movie-producer. The producer used broken English even on the billiard balls.

And it was this same producer whose favorite relative was one of his supervisors. So he invited him to hear a lecture on Buddhism. "Not me," was the answer. "What do I care about raising flowers?"

Once Over Lightly:

Babe Ruth has completed a two-reel motion picture for Warners' studios in New York . . . John Gielgud's "Hamlet" will be presented by Guthrie McClintic in Boston this season. Gielgud is going to London in February, the play closes December 12 in New York, so Boston will see it between those periods . . . Among the widely-known "legitimate theater" press-agents currently sequestered in Boston are Charles Emerson Cook, Charlie Bochert, George Degnan, Al Spink, Forrest Crossman and Ben Washer, the youngest of the lot . . . Crossman, who is heralding "Blossom Time," was born at No. 1 Marlboro street, Boston . . .

Lillian Hellman's next play, her first since "The Children's Hour," has been booked into Martin Jones' Vanderbilt Theater, New York . . . Jones is in town. He was at the Mayfair last night with Vivian Duncan . . . Morris Gest attended two premieres last night. He saw part of the Ballet Russe performance at the Opera House, and part of "Dead End" at the Colonial . . . Ann Corio received a tempting offer from Buddy De Sylva to make a picture for Universal . . . They met here by chance at a party for Bert Lahr . . .

Lornie Gibbons, Dorchester high all-interscholastic center, also has attracted attention of the movie scouts, and is in New York now . . . He's 21, and they rant about his future . . . Herbert J. Devine, the South Boston lad who explored the innards of China for years and came out an expert of Chinese art, arrived in town last night. His galleries in New York are widely-known, and as curator of the Los Angeles Museum of Oriental Art at the age of 29, his reputation became one of the best in his line . . .

Mr. Whelton Is Heard From:

The same swell sense of news values which made him one of Boston's best newspapermen before he went West still motivates our absent Paul Whelton. He has found in Vine street, Los Angeles, a firm name which he considers the ultimate in something or other.

The shingle reads: "Gang and Kopp, attorneys-at-law."

As impartial sounding a law firm as this column has encountered.

Chatter:

The cleverest woman operator in the United States Secret Service (not the "G" branch) was a visitor in Boston over the week-end . . . A correspondent informs this department that he saw a group of visitors linger outside the Shubert Theater Friday night, while one of the party read the title "The Show Is On" . . . "It must be half over now," was the remark, and the group went on its way . . . The Old Woodcock Cafe, famous in the time of Boston's great boniface, Fred Rousseau, is operating again with Reggie Colton as the boss . . .

In honor of Eddie Cantor, Parkyakarkus, Deanna Durbin, Jacques Renard, Jimmy Wallington, and Betty Jane Cooper, a buffet supper will be held tonight at the Ritz-Carlton . . . F. F. Plimpton, superintendent of Tremont Temple for more than 35 years, has retired and is living in Sturbridge . . . The final curtain of "New Faces" falls at 11:20, but an elision or two is expected to bring the show's running time into normal . . . Peter Duffus, now working at the Brown Derby but formerly of Belle Livingston's Boston staff, has word from La Belle that the English husband she used to talk about has died . . . And bequeaths her a fortune. Belle is going back into the nightclub business, but in New York.

Margo Scores Again

Ballet Russe Stars Acclaimed Anew

By RUTH MARSTERS

The gala atmosphere that surrounds important openings pervaded the Boston Opera House last evening, the opening night of Colonel de Basil's Monte Carlo Ballet Russe' five-day engagement here.

The audience, though not of capacity size, was nevertheless both large and representative, one in short most commonly described as "brilliant."

"Cimarosiana" made a gay and colorful opening for a varied program which in the course of the evening brought each of the leading dancers into prominence, and admirably displayed the resources of the entire company.

"Cimarosiana," is a ballet divertissement to the music of Domenica Cimarosa, Italian composer of the eighteenth century. The choreography by Leonide Massine follows the early Italian traditions, combines both fantasy and comedy.

In it Tamara Toumanova made her first appearance of the evening in a "pas de deux" with David Lichine. She seemed to immediately electrify the audience. Certainly she is more intriguing than ever, her new slimness adding a touch of the piquant to her renownedly exotic personality.

Her dancing, it may be added, has also improved considerably, and we found ourselves suddenly among the vast number of Tamara enthusiasts.

• • •

"Choreartium," Massine's danced interpretation of Brahms' Fourth Symphony, followed. Whether or not the ballet does justice to the music, is a point which has been exhaustively discussed, and one with which we are not concerned at the moment. As a choreographic symphony the ballet in itself says a great deal, it was danced superbly, and the settings and costumes by Terechkovitch and Lourie are extremely well done.

In addition to the work of Tamara Toumanova and Leonide Massine in the principle figures of the whole, Nina Verchinina's performance in the Andante was outstanding, her dramatic delineation of the theme marked by an intensity rare in ballet.

The alloted space prohibits listing the complete cast. The performances of Riabouchinska, Danilova, Shabelevski, Massine, Petroff, Grigorieva, et al, here as throughout the evening were such as to keep the audience at a high pitch of enthusiasm.

"Le Spectre de la Rose" was exquisitely danced by Irina Baranova and Paul Petroff.

The program was brought to a close with the ever delightful "Le Beau Danube," with Danilova, Riabochinska and Massine in the principal roles.

The orchestra sounded well under the careful direction of both Antal Dorati conducting "Cimerosiana," "Le Spectre de la Rose" and "Le Beau Danube," and Efram Kurtz conducting "Choreartium." A great performance of the Brahms' Fourth Symphony was hardly to be expected and, with one's attention diverted to the stage, the performance was adequate.

WOMEN IN LOVE

By Mae Christie

CHAPTER 37

But shaking his head, the merchandise-manager strode out to the main floor and the elevators, and so up to his own office.

It was a terrible morning for Ann.

The axe was hanging . . . was liable to fall at any moment . . but, infinitely worse than the loss of a job she valued, was the detached cold attitude of one she had trusted implicitly believed every word of love he had spoken.

If this change of demeanor towards her were prompted by her error of judgment in buying, then surely it was inordinately harsh? Unjustified?

No one was infallible, least of all a girl who had never done a lucrative hand's turn in her brief existence until her entry less than five months ago into the store.

Not that Ann pitied herself, or asked for any lenience not accorded the other workers. To be summarily condemned for what in her own mind was no blunder, the store owner and his manager was cruelly harsh on the part of Paul Bradley, when she had put the question to him in a spirit of sarcasm, had admitted that he considered women unreliable in business, and unable to meet men on their own ground.

It made her furious. He was narrow-minded. It wasn't love she had felt for him in the moonlight, after Il Rococo it was only horrid old Mother Nature working . . . his good looks and propinquity . . . that was all!

The fleeting suspicion that he was jealous of Tim O'Hallahan at Rosalind's party had gone from her mind. His recent, coldly spoken rebuke about the manufacturer being unduly favored with orders from her came from a business man—her boss, and not her lover. It had no hint of the personal.

How could she know that she had been seen at the Opera with Tim O'Hallahan by the Gift Shop buyer? Her mother's chaperonage was omitted from the story which had been retailed to Herman Weiss?

Nor had Herman's version of her intimacy with the silk manufacturer lacked anything, imaginatively speaking, when yesterday he had summoned the merchandise-manager to his office. Herman could insinuate so skillfully that, no matter how one hated his innuendoes, some of the mud stuck. Not only for business reasons, but because of family reasons, the store owner had it in for Ann.

Hurt Dignity

First, there had been the question of her sister excluding his daughters from the fashionable card-party, when already they'd invited old acquaintances. Mother and the girls were still yapping about it. And hadn't he lowered his dignity by appealing to the hotel management, who told him there was nothing they could do about it! And the old acquaintances had had the last laugh.

Next, there was Tim O'Hallahan's defection in regard to Becky, his favorite child. Ann Delafield was responsible. She was taking graft, feathering her own nest.

Not outright did Herman unfold these suspicions to Paul.

But enough was said to shake his trust in Ann Delafield. She had lied to him about refusing invitations. Fooled him over Tim O'Hallahan. That was certain.

Yet feeling died hard.

"I have found her extremely competent and hard-working. Up to now, she has been a most capable buyer," he had told Mr. Weiss.

"Humph!"—incredulously.

"I grant you that her rise has been a rapid one, but I felt I was justified in the promotion."

"Oh, I know you're all for the buyers being young," conceded Herman. He chewed on the end of his cigar. "In my day, we considered that only the years brought experience. Now Miss Seiz of the Gift Shop—she's wide awake—no child—" He looked at Paul. Ought he to let him know that it was through her loyalty he had the goods on the young Lingerie buyer? Or would that be a tactical mistake?

Satisfied with her handiwork, Brenda Seiz gave further momentum to the story via the grapevine system. It was speedily bruited around the three thousand employes that Ann was to be fired—for taking graft!

"I hate New York with all my heart and soul!" said Gordon Gavin.

He had enjoyed an excellent dinner cooked by Renita Parrish in her apartment down in Greenwich Village. Now he was reclining in an easy chair by the open window, staring moodily at the Wall Street skyscrapers.

"What you want is a Scotch highball. I'll fix one for you," said the eager hostess. "I'm permanently on the wagon, but a tired man needs his little drink."

She thought of everything. His favorite dishes. Even the expensive brand of imported cigarettes he used to indulge in, in his Harvard days.

"I loathe New York!" he repeated, when Renita came out of the kitchenette carrying a tray on which was a bottle, a soda syphon, some ice cubes, and a long glass. She set the tray beside him.

"You're all tired out with the difficult mental work of yours. I always say that the advertising is the hardest part of the business. Buying and selling are child's play, Gordon, compared to what you're doing. I just can't think how you can dig up so many clever things to write about!"

"Over and over—that's the trouble!" he groaned. "Bradley turned my copy down this morning, and I had to do it all over. It is so darned monotonous, shut up in a cell no bigger than a dog's kennel, trying to wax lyrical over step-ins and pink panties, and heaven knows what! I'm sick of it!"

"They work you too hard!"

"All day. Like a machine! Why, our English professor in Harvard told us that no writer can work more than three hours a day if he's to turn out good stuff."

Squash PIE WITH Ginger MERINGUE

FROM MARTHA LEE'S WEDNESDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

MINCE or pumpkin pie—what shall it be on Thanksgiving Day? Each family is a law unto itself when it comes to choosing the dessert for this traditional meal.

Of course, in early times three or four different pies were served and eaten by the hearties of those days but with the present vogue of weight watching and calorie counting one or at most two is sufficient.

This squash pie is a favorite of ours. Moist and delicate, it has a topping of ginger meringue which complements the flavor of the squash.

SQUASH PIE WITH GINGER MERINGUE

- 2 cups squash, cooked and strained
- ½ cup granulated sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¾ teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ teaspoon ginger
- 3 eggs
- 1 cup milk
- ½ cup heavy cream

Steam squash and run through puree strainer and drain off water before measuring. Measure and sift dry ingredients, add to squash, stir until mixed; add eggs, slightly beaten. Add milk and cream. If there are any lumps strain before pouring into 9-inch unbaked pie shells. Bake in a hot oven (450 deg. F.) 30 to 40 minutes or until a knife inserted comes out clean. Spread meringue on pie last 15 minutes of baking.

GINGER MERINGUE

- 2 egg whites
- ¼ cup granulated sugar
- 1-16 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon candied ginger, chopped fine

Beat egg whites, add sugar and salt slowly and continue beating until stiff but moist. Fold in candied ginger. Spread on squash pie about 15 minutes before done, bake until meringue is a light golden brown.

MINCE PIELETS WITH LEMON MERINGUE

- Pastry
- Mincemeat
- 3 egg whites
- ½ cup sugar
- Grated rind of 1 lemon

Bake individual tart shells. Fill with the mincemeat. Make a meringue of egg whites, sugar and grated lemon rind. Place on top of tarts. Bake in a slow oven, 325 deg. F., for about 10 to 15 minutes or until delicately browned.

CRANBERRY PIE
(Open Face)

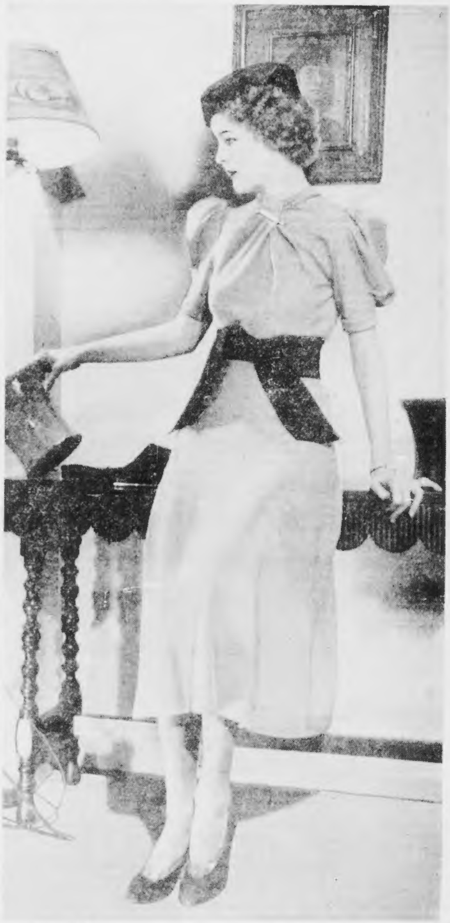
- 2 cups water
- 2 cups sugar
- 1 quart cranberries
- Grated rind 1 orange
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon cold water
- Pastry

Boil sugar and water for 10 minutes. Add cranberries and orange rind, cover and simmer 5 minutes. Uncover, cook until clear. Add salt and cornstarch dissolved in cold water. Cool and turn into pastry lined pie tin. Bake in very hot oven, 450 deg. F., for 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 deg. F. and continue baking for 20 minutes.

Admiral Reeves to Retire

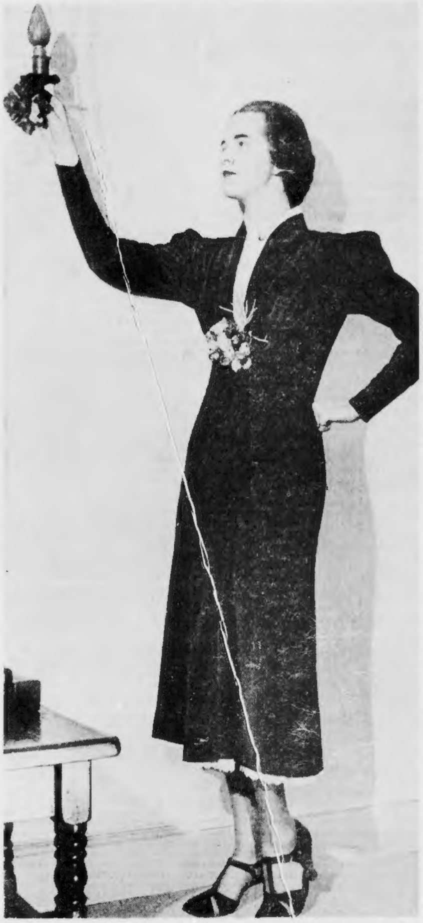
Washington, Nov. 25 (INS)—The active career of Rear Admiral Joseph Mason Reeves, chairman of the navy general board and one of the nation's most distinguished naval officers, will close December 1 with his automatic age retirement, Secretary of the Navy Swanson announced today.

Under-the-Coat Frocks With Extra Share of Charm



BACK UP your own natural good taste with the ultra-discrimination of the Fashion Congress juries and you'll find an easier road to wardrobe perfection than you'd have believed ever existed! Tucked in among the high-fashions are often found budget darlings that have the "certain air" the Congress seeks. Inevitably, these frocks look dollars more than they cost.

Here is a pair, with particular laurels heaped on the little beige number above, left. It is a sheer beige wool with a wondrous black suede belt that looks as though it were simply crossed over with ends dangling. It will do your noblest black coat proud, even though it be a costly Persian. It is around sixteen dollars! Miss Polly Keppler models.



Notice the new short sleeves, the slim-fitted flare skirt, the drape bodice pierced with a brilliant pin. You can't see the fabric textile, but it has a fascinating oatmeal nub through its sheer lightness.

Right, Miss Evelyn Hassman models another afternoon frock, but one which is in definitely a frivolous mood. Take off its impertinent lingerie dust-ruffle, and perhaps the moss-rose nosegay, and it turns into a business-like model with just enough prettiness to suit the "girl with a little curl" personality. It is hard-wearing and wrinkle-resisting black alpaca. The lingerie motif is repeated at the neckline. There are pounds of flattery to every ounce in this frock!

DICKY IS BEATEN ON LUGGAGE QUESTION

By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 160

IF I did not believe firmly in the saying that "a pun is the lowest form of wit," I should say that Dicky's very feet spelled defeat as he came downstairs after his encounter with Katherine.

I knew, of course, how thoroughly she must have deflated him, when he had gone up to the nursery to appeal to her concerning the luggage carrier I wished put on the car.

WILLIAMS TO HELP

"You can change a subject more quickly, and with what feminine writes love to call 'aplomb' than anybody I know," he said. "But you're right, at that. We can jerk Leslie out of here, pronto. I'll go now and see that the job's started. Has Williams finished breakfast, I wonder? We'll need everybody on the job. I fancy, Leslie's likely to be like a wild cat, and they don't want to muss up his manly beauty too much—he already has a beauty of a shiner."

"If Williams hasn't finished breakfast," I said, "he can easily come back to it, later. I'll see that Katie keeps everything hot for him."

"Okay on that," Dicky said, "but make it snappy. And then let Katie put her pots and pans on the back of the stove, and do you take her back upstairs with you. I'll lock the kitchen door as we go out after seeing that all the other doors are locked. And I don't want anybody of this household to come downstairs until I come in again and give you permission."

WILL BE CAREFUL

I had turned toward him at his warning, and as he finished I rushed back to him, and took firm hold of his coat lapels.

"And I want you to be careful, do you hear?" I said chokingly. "It's very easy for you to send me off upstairs where I can't possibly help you and then have you go out into heaven knows what danger."

"'Danger!'" Dicky echoed with a scornful laugh that heartened me as I knew he meant it to do.

"Then why do you insist that we all stay on the second floor?" I asked.

"Because, stupid," Dicky explained with exasperation, in which, however, there was a tender intonation. "I shall have enough on my mind without wondering whether wife, child or kitchen maid may not dash into the open at any minute. Now runalong and round up Katie."

Richman Workers Get Turkey Gifts

M. J. White, store manager, stated that the company was grateful for the "fine co-operation" shown by employes of the store and that he hoped the gift idea would be annual.

Life of Robert Taylor:

Heartbreaker Even as Child

Robert Taylor makes love on the silver screen and a million women wish they could meet him. Lydia Calvert, special writer for the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, did just that and writes a thrilling story of the fascinating talks she had with him.

By LYDIA CALVERT
Special to the Boston Evening American.

Hollywood, Cal., Nov. 25.—Robert is five years old.

With a tolerant politeness he allows his admirers to pat his cheek, kiss the back of his neck, bounce him on their knees.

His hair is black as coal and ruffled by the prairie winds, his cheeks are red as apples and his sturdy little body is full of vitality as a young colt turned out to pasture.

The out-of-doors, which he loves, has built him up into a splendid little animal. Looking back now you know that even then his little foot was firmly placed on the first rung of the ladder of success.

Aided by Luck

In the wings Lady Luck, too, had fallen in love with him and had begun to groom him for his part.

In her book she wrote: Robert Taylor, aged five, destination: Hollywood. In her mind there was no doubt. In his there was nothing but brimming happiness in the moment.

As for being a heartbreaker Taylor won't tell you a thing about it—even about when he was five but there were ways of finding out.

"The Heartbeat of America!" he scoffs. "No, that doesn't thrill me. Oh, they call me all sorts of names—some I can't repeat—but I don't care, just so I get along."

When Robert was five his father had become a full-fledged medico and started to practice in the busy town of Fremont. His popularity was immediate and a bit puzzling to the young doctor until he found that his fame as "the man who saved his wife" had gotten there before him.

People had an almost fanatic faith in Dr. Brugh. The little family knew complete happiness here in Fremont. The mother was almost entirely well, the child was healthy, the husband successful—all was right with the world.

But life was to be even more wonderful.

"About that time," narrates Bob, "my father met a distinguished physician of Beatrice, Dr. P. Y. Gass. In a year he and dad were working as professional associates. When Dr. Gass was called to another post in San Bernardino, California, father carried on the practice in Beatrice. Beatrice was a big city to me in those days."

The little boy was wide-eyed seeing the people coming and going, the big buildings, the noisy, dirty motor cars hanging up the street like tractors.

He started to school there. Here his character really began to form.

His mother, recalling those days, had told him:

"You were a very sensitive boy, high strung as they come. If anyone spoke to you harshly you couldn't sleep or eat until it was settled."

Roberts laughs at this now. He's still sensitive, but not to hurts. He's sensitive to sunsets "much more than sunrise" and to mountains—"oh, especially mountains—they give you a build-up" and to beautiful music.

As he met other children he learned to be independent. He started to think for himself.

He went to movies as often as his mother would let him, but it wasn't the heavy lovers that got him.

It was the two-gunned, hard-shooting, hard-riding Bill Harts, tearing across the prairies in a cloud of dust, taking canyons in their stride, swinging their lariats like cruel whips.

Hunched in the dark movie theater with his eyes turned to the big screen almost over his head, devouring it all, the piano going madly to the tune of the horses hoofs, the little boy rode with Bill Hart and Tom Mix.

He lassoed Indians and shot two guns at a time, he vaulted canyons on flying horse flesh, swam streams, scaled mountains.

He never dreamed that some day he would be on the screen, more famous than Hart or Mix, and that thousands would be held enthralled by his artistry.

"I still want to do blood and thunder things," he told me. "I want to do 'Scaramouche' and 'The Four Horsemen' and things like that."

"Of course I suppose we all want to do things we aren't best suited for. Chaplin, for instance would like to do drama."

"But, gee, period things scare me to death. Hand a guy a cape and cane and a top-hat and he wants to chew the set down. I'd much rather wear a pair of slacks and shirt."

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Women by the Hundreds Offer to Wed Lonely Maine Bachelor

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Maine farmer wrote me a week ago, requesting the name of a woman he might meet and marry.

Unfortunately, I published his letter—not to give him the information he sought, but to inform him that under no circumstances could I act as a matrimonial agency.

But would women take my hint? Not at all. From every town and city in New England they wrote. Letters, postcards, telegrams and 'phone calls came every hour.

Would I please make this one exception? Couldn't I just once break a rule? There was so much to gain; so little to lose.

There were widows, spinsters and divorcees—even high school girls among the pleaders. Different though their circumstances might be, they had one thought in common. They all wanted to go to that farm in Maine—to happiness and security.

It didn't matter much what the man was, or how bad or good a husband he might make. The farm was the only consideration. They'd take the man on my say-so.

Of course, I didn't reveal his name. And the farmer can thank me for not doing so. For had I broken my little rule and sent all these women to him, he'd be in a position to make old Solomon look like a confirmed bachelor.

THE ONLY WAY

There is only one sensible way to find a husband. That is to go where likely husbands are apt to be. The church, the club, the homes of friends and the night school are the happy hunting grounds of matrimony.

I advise all women, young or old, who want to be married to go to these places. They'll never find a husband sitting at home and expecting him to open the door and come sailing in.

No women has to advertise for a husband in a newspaper or magazine. There is a prospect always within a mile of her door. And if she takes the trouble to go out and look around a few times, she is bound to find him.

It is a happy circumstance of life that men who want to be married always go to church and club events. They are almost never to be found in the comfortable chair by the fireside at home. So a woman resolved to be married seldom has to remain a spinster or widow if she puts a little effort into the job of finding a husband.

I'LL STEER, NOT FIND

I am always pleased to counsel and guide women who want to interest men. My job is to steer them toward matrimony—a task which I have performed with considerable success for nearly two generations.

But don't, I pray you, ask me to find the husband. That's a mighty big order for a woman to whom more than 200,000 people write each year. And it's an order I just haven't got the courage to fill.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My parents made a match for me, which makes me more critical than if I had picked out my own husband. They are old country people, and not accustomed to American ways. My husband was a widower of 48, and I was a girl of 19 years, when we were married. We've been married six years, have no children, and I find myself very lonesome at times.

My husband is devoted, too devoted, and I have all I can manage to keep from showing him how bored and restless I am. He works very hard during the day, and if he takes me to a movie, or out to see my friends in the evening, he usually goes to sleep; not a quiet little cat-nap, for he sometimes snores.

I'm thinking of adopting a child, and he is willing—anything to keep me contented. But I'm getting more and more restless. Why do parents insist on making their children's matches for them?

BORED.

MY DEAR CHILD:

Your idea of adopting a child is excellent.

And let me urge you not to lose any time about making the necessary arrangements. If you can afford it, why not adopt two children, as the fate of an only child is likely to present problems.

They become self-centered, and are apt to be spoiled.

Two youngsters are a better solution. And here are my very best wishes to you in this new venture.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

When the children were small and I was fat and bulky, my husband and I used to go places together, and he seemed to enjoy it. Now that the children have grown up, and I have again become slender and much younger looking, and am still in my thirties, my husband never takes me any place.

I truly and dearly love him and could not enjoy myself without him. But when I ask him why he doesn't take me out, his only answer is silence, and he is slowly killing the deep love and affection I've always had for him. Yet he says he loves me, but that's hard for me to believe.

Would it be all right if I went out occasionally with my friends? I'm awfully tired from housework, but everyone has to have a little recreation sometimes. Don't you think so?

MADAME X.

DEAR FRIEND:

Indeed, I do think so. People who never have recreation or change are apt to become eccentric. Ruts aren't good for anyone.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A Basic Recipe

A TIME-SAVER for the busy housewife is to follow one simple fool-proof recipe—and add a new exciting flavor each time.

Foundation Two-Egg Cake
- ½ cup butter or other shortening
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- 2¼ cups sifted cake flour
- 2¼ teaspoons baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¾ cup milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter and sugar; add eggs well beaten; then dry ingredients alternately with milk and vanilla; beat until smooth.

One time add a cup of walnuts or —yummy-yummy— hickory nuts; another time 2-3 cup raisins, lightly floured. For quick company cakes what is more appealing than the rich flavor of 2-3 cup candied pineapple or a scanty 2-3 cup of cocoanut. Or 2-3 cup candied rinds —orange, lemon or citron—will give your cup cakes new zest.

Epsom Salts Facial Does Wonders in Toning and Stimulating Skin

By DONNA GRACE

AT ONE of the recent fashion shows we overheard two women talking of the usual things such as clothes and the daily interests, but all at once during a lull in the general noise we heard one of them say:

It's the baths which a girl takes that makes her skin so haggard and dull-looking. I don't believe we need a bath every week. It is weakening and certainly ruins the skin.

We could hardly believe our ears. They were intelligent looking people, but I do wonder what makes them think a bath once a week could be harmful. We have always felt that at least one bath a day was a part of our daily schedule, and we like a shower in the morning and a luxurious tub bath at night.

The skin needs stimulation, and there is no better way to do this than by the bath. The sebaceous glands are supplying the oils that lubricate the skin, and the pores permit the elimination of the waste fluids. This function goes on all the time, and even though one may feel that the skin is soiled in any sense, it needs to be refreshed and cleansed by a daily bath.

Skin that is not bathed frequently and regularly is quite likely to become horny and calloused because the dry chiffon skin is not removed as it should be, and also during the cold weather we have the condition known as goose pimples. This is nature's way of protecting the skin against the change of temperature, but when the skin is kept healthy and clean, it becomes so soft and pliable it will seldom have this rough surface. When the skin functions normally, the circulation of fresh blood to the surface will prevent callouses and chills.

There is nothing quite so invigorating as the salt glow type of bath. It is so simple we are apt to overlook its benefit, but if a jar of salt is kept in the bathroom it will be a reminder to use it often. There is nothing complicated about it. All you need do is to rub the body all over with salt just as one does with alcohol, but of course there will be a good friction to the salt and it will leave the skin thoroughly smooth and glowing.

I will be glad to send you the Epsom Salts Pack, a marvelous facial rejuvenator, if you will enclose a stamped, self-addressed envolpe for your reply. Address Donna Grace, Boston Evening American.

Ripley Treasures Seen by Hundreds

New York, Nov. 25—Priceless elephant trappings of gold; the sacred horns of India; unbelievable treasures from all the far corners of the world, all part of a collection belonging to Robert L. ("Believe It or Not") Ripley were on exhibit for the first time before a gathering of 600 men and women at the Lotus Club.

It was ladies' day, and, to celebrate the occasion, the members turned the entertainment over to their fellow member, Bob Ripley, who partly dismantled his palatial home in Mamaroneck, N. Y., and led a fleet of trucks to New York to show the many intimate "Believe It or Nots" he has uncovered and acquired in his expeditions through more than 185 foreign countries.

Radio News and Notes:

Holiday Radio Features on Air Tonight and Tomorrow

By N. F. T.

Quite as birds fill the ovens of the land, the radio bits that fill the loudspeakers from coast to coast are likewise ready and waiting between now and Friday, to fully and fittingly observe Thanksgiving.

"N. F. T."

Everything from Pilgrim's landing re-enactments to solemn hymn-songs has been designed to make the dials literally resplendent with striking air attractions. Not forgetting by any manner of means, numerous football game descriptions due to be wafted. Workers in the radio realm will be hard at it to make their "mike" efforts worth while and the listener holiday enjoyable. May the sponsors have foresight enough to soft pedal their peddling spiels and be duly thankful for the privileges that are theirs on other days and nights of the year.

HUB HIGHLIGHTS

This evening's regular "Metropolitan Singers" half hour (WNAC) between 7:30 and 8 o'clock promises a particularly effective effort by the 100 male voices who sing under the direction of Roy Harlow. One of the top turns will be vocalizing of "The Angelus" by Walter Kidder, baritone of the chorus, to be joined by the entire company, including Selma Johanson, soprano; Jack Kilty, tenor; Rakov and his violin and Francis J. Cronin at the console.

• • •

Tomorrow afternoon, over the 1:30 to 3 o'clock hour and one-half, a vivid holiday impression will win its way without a doubt. It's a striking roundup of Boston radio stars. Among them, for example, the following names loom and indicate the character of the broadcast (WNAC), as planned: Alice O'Leary, Jackie Duggan, Professor Robert E. Rogers, the Boston American columnist; Roland Winters, Eddie Casey, for football commentating; the Bachelors Quartet; Virginia Warren, soprano; Andy Jacobsen, popular band boss; Walter Kidder, baritone, and again the artful Francis J. Cronin for the organ offerings.

SONGS OF SENTIMENT

Melodies out of the past, namely "The Old Oaken Bucket" and "After the Ball Is Over" and "Silver Threads Among the Gold" get the spotlight (WEEI) when its "Cavalcade of America" time this evening from 8 to 8:30 o'clock. Don Voorhees and his orchestra have the interpretations to offer.

• • •

Fred Allen will present "Big Buffalo," a full-blooded Cherokee Indian chief who asserts his ancestors were here when the "Mayflower" arrived, and Gary Brown, baritone singing chef who is famous for his roast turkey, as amateur entertainers on his Thanksgiving Eve broadcast at the "Town Hall Tonight" session (WNAC) this evening at 9 o'clock.

• • •

The efficiency of modern scientific detective methods will be demonstrated on the "Gang Busters" program (WEEI) tonight from 10 to 10:30. Phillips H. Lord and a cast of well-known radio performers will re-enact the Walter E. Rathbourne forgery case which rocked New York police officialdom a year ago.

SOME STARS STUCK

Many radio stars will observe Thanksgiving Day in the traditional American style handed down by the Pilgrims, although at least a half-dozen or more of them will have to leave the table without waiting for a second helping of pumpkin pie.

To a few, Thanksgiving Day will be just like any other Thursday in the year.

Rudy Vallee, for example, will miss his turkey and Thanksgiving afternoon football game for the eighth consecutive year. His variety hour is on the air every Thursday night, and Rudy never eats a heavy meal before broadcasting. He rehearses all afternoon.

Learn to Tap Dance for Fun and Exercise

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

MEDICINE doesn't have to taste bad to do you good . . . and the more fun you get out of exercise, the better it is for you! Playing for your daily dozen takes all the monotony out of routine exercise, and the exhilaration to your spirits stimulates muscle tone.

If exercise is your idea of less than nothing to do, join a gym class—there's never a dull moment and you'll enjoy your exercise. Don't alibi that you cannot find a gym class.

Your local Y. W. C. A. has classes for housewives who are not in shape and for business girls who are not in trim. There are also classes at private gymnasiums and individual instruction at figure salons. At all these places as much fun as possible is injected into exercise.

You can take your choice of classes. Anyone can learn to tap dance well enough for fun and exercise—and it makes the nicest leg muscles. You get a couple of daily dozen out of the modern dance, in which you leap, twist and turn in rhythm to develop grace and symmetery. You try it—it's too much exercise for us! We like the rhythm classes for relaxation.

When you exercise at home, get into the mood by jumping into shorts or a swim suit, and switch the radio to a lively tune. Exercise is more fun and more invigorating to the rhythm of music.

You need something to work with in playing for exercise. Get a regular exercise jump rope at a department store. Don't try to use a child's skip rope, which is too short and too light in weight.

There are also handy stretching bars on the market. These can be rigged up in a convenient doorway to add interest to your home gymnasium. Stretching from a bar makes a slim waist, firm upper arms and a lovely bust contour.

Do you ever ride a bike? Don't wait until you get to Bermuda! Bicycling is tops in exercise, because, as a leading psychologist expressed it, you have to pay for your ride with leg work. That's applying psychology to physiology!

There is no beauty without health, and exercises which promote vitality bring a double reward. Play is your escape from routine, and the more fun you get out of it, the more regularly you will exercise.

Poor Hearing Is an Unfair Handicap

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

NOT so long ago I told you how important is the early recognition of defective hearing in the school child.

Today I want to tell you a bit more about this serious problem of childhood.

Bear in mind that normal hearing is essential to the child. School work requires a constant use of the ears. What he hears is as much a part of the child's education as what he learns by seeing or doing things. Like defective sight, impaired hearing is a definite handicap, not only in school work, but in the physical and social progress of the child.

Many children are backward in their school work, not making the necessary progress. In many instances this is not because of any mental defect but merely because they are the victims of impaired hearing. Of course, not all such cases are of a serious nature, and often they respond to simple treatment. But every effort must be made to determine the actual extent of the defect.

It is unfair to a child to have him compete in school work when he is handicapped by poor hearing. As a result of this defect, he becomes inattentive and soon falls behind his class. This may result in the development of an inferiority complex and extreme nervousness.

My advice to all parents is to consult with the doctor if there is a suspicion of faulty hearing in a child. This is especially recommended if the child requires repetition of commands and requests. Of course, it is well to investigate all other possible causes of inattention.

Gest Relives His Boston Boyhood

Visits Memory Scenes

Morris Gest, the Boston immigrant boy, who became one of the world's most artistic theatrical producers, is back in town for the opening of his latest play, "Lady Precious Stream," at the Plymouth next Monday. This is the first of two stories about him.

Fuzzy velour hat cocked on the side of his head, black cravat flapping in the breeze, Morris Gest hop-skipped down the steps of a hotel on Tremont street today and told a policeman that he wanted somebody to guide him around Boston so he could live his boyhood all over again.

Patrolman James J. Hughes glowed. He was an old-timer in Boston's theater district. He said he'd be glad to play the part of guide.

Gest, swathed in a sky-blue overcoat, tapped slim fingers against his forehead. Thus he sat in the automobile as it moved along Washington street.

MEMORY OF LADY

Now he was waving his arms like a windmill. He wrapped his arm around Patrolman Hughes' shoulder.

"We shall go down to the old Fall River depot and make-believe, you and I. I shall be the little boy from Russia and you shall be the policeman who takes my hand."

As the car streaked toward Haymarket Relief Station—for some reason he thought it was the "best and nearest" to a depot—Gest talked on about a quiet old lady at 90 Salem street who mothered him the very first day he landed in Boston.

He had a tag pinned to his lapel. It said, "To Freedman Bros., 90 Salem street, Boston. From Vilna, Russia."

No sooner had the automobile stopped than Gest scurried behind one of the pillars of the Haymarket Relief Station. A crowd gathered. They watched him respectfully.

Hat off, bushy hair flowing in the wind, he peeked from behind the pillar. He said:

VISITS OLD SCHOOL

Gest spewed out something in Russian, grasped the patrolman's hand. Said the patrolman, abashed:

"Yes, yes, little boy, I'll take you to the house on Salem street."

MORRIS GUEST

And that was the next stop.

He loped across the street, squinted at the house. Then he turned to three children who stared at him curiously.

"I went to the same school you are attending, the Cushman school on Parmenter street.

"This is a marvelous feeling. Nothing is more wonderful than to do over things in life which you know have done the soul good."

(Another article, describing the colorful career of this quixotic producer, his personal convictions on modern art and "pictorial drama," will appear in Friday's Boston Evening American).

Boston Film Folk To Join in Zukor Silver Jubilee

By PEGGY DOYLE

Nation-wide plans for the celebration of the Adolph Zukor Silver Jubilee on January 7, starting day for a four-month drive of outstanding Paramount releases, were announced today by a group of leading executives of Paramount Pictures.

The announcement, including Boston's part in the drive, was made by Neil Agnew, vice-president, and Robert Gillham, advertising director of Paramount Pictures, in the Scollay square offices of Martin J. Mullin and Samuel Pinanski, M. & P. theaters heads.

The jubilee date marks Mr. Zukor's 63rd birthday, as well as Paramount's 25th aniversary, and will be the occasion of a Paramount studio party, to be attended by more than 2000 guests, including all the owners of theaters through which the company's pictures are released.

Stars Bernhardt

A feature of the celebration will be the showing of Mr. Zukor's first picture and the first full-length picture ever made, "Queen Elizabeth," starring Sarah Bernhardt, initial great European artist to appear in motion pictures. The picture was made in 1912.

Later the dean of motion picture showmen formed Famous Players, so named because its stars represented famous stage people. These mislaid their own very definite objections to "being in pictures" since the great Bernhardt became the bellwether to enter the films.

On December 3, the greats of the stage and screen who have been associated with Mr. Zukor during his sky-rocketing career will be guests at a banquet in his honor, to be given by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Sometime in January, Mr. Zukor will be in Boston for a similar observance, according to William Erbb, New England manager of Paramount Pictures, who is now perfecting the arrangements with Joe Unger, the company's Eastern sales manager, and Mr. Pinanski and Mr. Mullin.

"Champagne Waltz," co-starring Gladys Swarthout and Fred McMurray, which has been selected as the Adolph Zukor Silver Jubilee picture, will be previewed in Washington, D. C., and simultaneously in all the capitals of Europe, Australia and the Orient.

R. I. Unions Seek Textile Raises

Providence, R. I., Nov. 25 (AP)—Vice-President Horace A. Riviere of the United Textile Workers of America announced today the Rhode Island Textile Council, representing 42 unions of the U. T. W. of A., would meet Friday night to make formal demands for wage increases in all textile plants not yet given them.

Landslide Kills Alaskan Child

Juneau, Alaska, Nov. 24 (AP)—Lorraine Vanderbilt, three, died in a hospital here tonight two hours after she was rescued from a landslide in which she lay buried for two days.

Her life was the seventh claimed by the muddy avalanche which swept through an apartment house district here Sunday night.

Not a Laxative

Nujol is an internal lubricant, not a laxative, so cannot gripe. Take Nujol regularly and you will prevent the absorption into the blood of poisons from the constipated bowel.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach, and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is so safe, so gentle and so natural in its action.

Nujol makes up for a deficiency of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular bowel movements without griping.

Just try Nujol regularly for the next month and see if you don't feel better than you ever suspected you could.

DOES YOUR HUSBAND CALL YOU GROUCHY?

He's truthful if not tactful. Manlike, he is bewildered by your offishness and irritability. He can't understand what you have to be blue about. He wishes that you'd snap out of it. He'd do anything he could to help you. If he knew how good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was, he'd go straight to the nearest drug store and buy you a bottle.

Mrs. Barbara Spears

"My husband says I am my old self again," says Mrs. Barbara Spears, 799 Elma Street, Akron, Ohio. "I was tired and all in with no appetite. Had no pep and was in poor spirits. Your Vegetable Compound eliminated that awful tired feeling."

Don't try your husband's patience too far. Get a bottle from your druggist NOW. It probably will help you, because nearly a million American women know from personal experience that it helps them.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

BY

Marguerite Downey

A model glider slips through the air. With every spin and dip of its balsa wood body goes the heart of American youth. Courageous, daring young hearts which quicken at the mention of anything aeronautical. They're the Junior Birdmen of America.

Marguerite Downey

Although organized only two years ago, the undertaking has mushroomed and its membership now totals a half million. The New England group which also includes eastern Canada boasts of 43,000 aviation enthusiasts actively engaged in fashioning model planes.

Moving spirit of the [illegible] is William Randolph Hearst who, in 1934, felt the need of organization among air-minded boys and girls. Purpose of the undertaking was twofold: to furnish youth with rudimentary knowledge of aeronautics and prepare them for a career in the world of aviation.

Hero worship plays a large part in the organization. Its coinage engendered by daring exploits [illegible] as Lindbergh, [illegible] Frank Hawks and Amelia Earhart.

On admission to the club you serve your apprenticeship as a Fledgling. Three months after enrollment, you're eligible for Eagle rating. To acquire this standing an examination is necessary. If a grade of 70 per cent or more is achieved, a free silver and white Eagle [illegible] is sent as a symbol of merit.

Then comes the Ace test. The contestant must enter three events, either the indoor or outdoor model air races and must finish in one of the first five places. An Ace bar and a certificate membership card are given to all successful applicants and are usually awarded at a banquet.

Birdmen Compete at South Armory Friday

Any gossip and enthusiastic applause will echo through the South Armory, Huntington avenue, Friday, when the grand conclave of Boston's Wing Clubs is held. Three contests will be featured—glider, stick and cabin.

A craft to be eligible in the second class must be of solid construction and powered by a rubber band motor. As its name signifies it consists of stick plus wings and tail covered with micro-film. Here's where the family bath-tub and wire coat hanger come into play.

Micro-film is a gelatinous substance which solidifies on contact with water. No better place to shape the fabric for the wings than in the family bath-tub, no more practical moulder than a coat-hanger stretched to a certain shape. The cellophane-like material is then applied to the skeleton of the model which is fashioned of minute strips of balsa wood . . . a product lighter than cork.

Contestants in the cabin event must go in for streamlines. No abrupt construction can add to the cabin which must completely enclose the [illegible] motor. The model in this class [illegible] landing gear with revolving wheels of [illegible] quarter of an inch. The ship must take off from the ground under its own power which consists of a rubber band, made taut with an "egg-beater."

Most of the Birdmen's technical knowledge has been acquired from the series of 12 books which have been written by outstanding authorities on navigation, radio and theory of flying. In no time youthful experts become conversant with such terms as differentials, ailerons, torques and pitot-dynamic tubes. Needless to say they swarm the airport and devour popular science magazines.

Girls Taking Up Model Plane Sport

However technical this hobby may sound, the field is no male sanctuary. Feminine intruders are usually determined to be air-hostesses but they do a goodly amount of whittling and plane-modeling.

Barbara M[illegible] of Springfield outdid her competitors in the recent stick class and won the coveted gold medal. Others who [illegible] do too badly are Anneliese Dorrwachter of Jamaica Plain and Dorothy C[illegible] of Dorchester.

Great deal of originality is displayed in the names which such clubs bear. One group is known as "The Flying Jeeps." Then of course there are the Red Devils, Leaping Lenas, Flying Comets and Mystery Aces. Then there's a group in Everett who, anxious to pay tribute to the late John Shobe, have called their group the Shobe Memorial Squadron.

AUSTEN LAKE

Reproach Under the Goal Posts: Kelly's End Zone Decision

THE CLAMOR OVER THE DARTMOUTH-PRINCETON end zone decision rages on with today's clinical review of the movies in [illegible] room.

Austen Lake

Movies are one of the devil's devices to chivvy big game football officials and [illegible] controversies [illegible] I have not seen [illegible] of [illegible] Kelly's decision [illegible] opinions.

As one [illegible] I suppose I [illegible] shoulder and let the uproar blow itself out. But, regardless of what [illegible] movies show I know that Kelly made his ruling according to conscience and on 20 years' background and [illegible].

He, of the 45,000 witnesses, was nearest and therefore clearest in his view of what happened. There was no hesitancy, no chewing the nubbin of his honker, no miasmic fandango of a man torn between conflicting doubts. He hopped directly to the spot where Handrahan and Kaufman were sprawled, heeled it and wigwagged his verdict while half of the 45,000 froze with horror and the other half expelled their breath in a grateful gasp.

Snap-Shot Decision

IT HAPPENED IN A SPLIT-SECOND during which Kelly had to interpret the intent of both players toward each other and the ball, marshal the facts in chronological order and render his verdict in a single motion. He had no movies to study, no chance to ask a dark room operator to stop the action at the crucial point while he observed body tortions at the moment of contact.

Nor, when he had made his ruling, could he clarify it according to courtroom procedure by reading sonorously from a legal brief, "Whereas, in the opinion of this court, the Dartmouth defendant did, by malice or accident, expose certain portions of his [illegible] in such a manner as to dump the party of the second part . . ."

* * *

Blaik and Bennett Meet Test

WHEN THE GAME ENDED A SHORT TIME later, an unusual thing happened. The crowd scrambled down from the slopes, milling and muttering toward the exits and sweeping players and officials along in its vortex. Somehow, in the press, Coach Earl Blaik of Dartmouth worked his way out to where Kelly was being poured over with journeyman abuse. He linked arms with the official and stood ready to fend off any impulsive bigot who might like to wind up a Sunday punch

A [illegible] tain, offered [illegible] with no trace of [illegible] of these acts were [illegible] ing internally [illegible] tional memory [illegible] who stood [illegible] had the [illegible] sweet [illegible]

Same Game, Different Conditions

THIS GAME PROVED AGAIN THAT NO football official is any better than the breaks of the contest in which he works. For example the four men who officiated at Palmer Stadium last Saturday were the same four who worked the same game a year ago under the most atrocious conditions known to man when a blizzard swirled down and buried the field, obliterating the lines and making the ball slippery and the ground greasy. Yet, beyond the appearance of the much publicized "twelfth man," the game was one of those simple things which your Aunt Minnie could have worked in her bustle and hoopskirts.

[illegible] rated "cum laude" that day and, presumably [illegible] of it, the same quartet were nominated to repeat [illegible] Saturday the day was ideal. Sticky sunshine [illegible] gay [illegible] of garden colors. The turf was [illegible]

But everything in the imp-of-spite's notebook popped up, twitchy, controversial matters which warmed the cockles of the crowd's indignation alternately on one side or t'uther. Not that I mean to rebuke the partisans who paid $3.30 to enjoy their vocal holiday, but just that, this time, four prophets from o'er the River Jordan, with halos and flowing robes, couldn't have stayed out of the doghouse. In fact the four linened-lawyers were deep in the beagle bungalow before Kelly's end zone decision crowned the glory of the afternoon.

BRUINS Tie With HAWKS

TEAM SHOWS NEW LIFE

By BILL GRIMES

Title Threat

Any club that takes the Leafs in the Queen City and the Hawks in the Windy City on successive nights is a serious threat for top honors in any N. H. L. campaign.

Judging from the article of hockey played by his charges last night Art Ross has been talking to the Bruins like a Dutch uncle. A week ago, the Rossmen were slow, listless and outclassed. Last night, they looked like an entirely different aggregation.

The Chicago goal was the result of a break, for instead of dropping dead back of the nets, "Mush" March's shot, half way through the first period, caromed off the screen and came out to the left of the Boston cage, directly on "Doc" Romnes stick. The carom was so fast and so unexpected that Tiny Thompson did not have sufficient time to slide across to the other corner of the net in time to get in the path of Romnes' drive.

More Changes

If I know Connie Smythe, the resignation of King Clancy is only the first step in a general shake up that'll bring [illegible] to the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Anytime the M[illegible] but three points [illegible] pleasant company. He's been on the warpath all season because Dick Irvin has been unable to come up with a winning combination

The Hawks have contributed the three points won by the Leafs this season but, in the meantime, Toronto has dropped a home and home series to Detroit, lost at home to the Americans and the Bruins and last night they were knocked [illegible] York

Connie Smythe has had his fill of disappointments and at any moment now he's likely to call for a new deal and when he does he'll clear house from top to bottom.

However, Connie Smythe is not the only N. H. L. boss upset on account of the poor showing of his club. Take the cases of Clem Loughlin of the Blackhawks and Tommie Gorman of the Maroons. The Hawks [illegible] this season and the Maroons have but one victory to their credit

Of this trio, Loughlin is in the toughest spot, for he's a manager-coach while Smythe and Gorman [illegible] the Maple Leaf Gardens and the Montreal Forum.

'TURN Pro'—College CAPTAIN

BLASTS GRID PROGRAM

Chicago, Nov. 25 (INS)—A challenge to Chicago University to sponsor its football team openly as a professional one or "leave the Big Ten Conference," was made today by Sam Whiteside, co-captain of the 1936 Maroon team.

[illegible]

Football at Chicago will either have to become professional like other schools in the conference or the school should leave the conference, Whiteside was quoted as saying. "I would like to see the former course taken. Chicago football cannot go on in its present manner.

[illegible]

Football as it exists at the university is unfair to the player who is asked to put forth a vast deal of effort without any return," Whiteside charged.

[illegible]

He asserted: "It is impossible to attract athletes to Chicago with high tuition when they can go to other schools where the cost of education is lower and where the players get some help." He added:

"What we must do here to attract athletes is to sell them on the university, not buy them. But we are doing neither."

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Well sir, here's a story that starts out with another story. A long time ago I got a letter, sent to the Adventurers' Club, from Java, in the Dutch East Indies, way over on the other side of the world. It came from Kaboel, whose address was Panggoengweg No. 2, Tegal, Java, and Kaboel said that he'd read in the paper that I was giving away money, and would I please send him a hundred dollars because he was very poor.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Well sir, I wrote Kaboel a letter telling him I couldn't send him any money until he'd sent in an adventure yarn good enough to print in this column, and—well—I guess they have adventures over in Java, too, because in came the yarn from Kaboel.

Incidentally, here's where the Adventurers' Club breaks another ironclad rule. You know these yarns are all true and they all have to be vouched for. It's the club's custom to require that all papers be signed by the adventurer's name in full—first and last name, complete. But what are you going to do when a guy hasn't got any last name.

Kaboel writes, "Kaboel is the only name I have. I am a pure blooded Javanese boy, and we do not have family names."

And now for Kaboel's story. He says he's had lots of adventures, but this time he's going to tell us about a boar [illegible] he went on with his father and some of their [illegible] years.

They set out for a week's hunting in the jungle one [illegible] 1929, taking with them a supply of BERAS, or [illegible] rice, and DENDENG, which is meat prepared [illegible].

[illegible] and carried them back to camp.

On the second night, about eight o'clock, a boar came out of the jungle across from where they were hiding. Kaboel and his dad both fired. The shot told. The boar stumbled and fell.

But the next moment he was on his feet again, his eyes gleaming malevolently, and was coming at them like a hurricane.

The guns they were using were old single shot affairs. There was no time to reload them. Kaboel's dad yelled to him to run, while he dashed off in another direction.

[illegible]

The boar went thundering by him. Before he could stop he was [illegible] away, and that was all the room Kaboel needed. Before the animal could turn around, Kaboel had started up the tree.

The boar saw him—charged again—but he was just too late. By the time he reached the tree again Kaboel was sitting pretty on one of the lower limbs.

But the boar wasn't giving up yet. He made a few desperate lunges up the side of the tree trunk, trying to climb up after Kaboel, then he began to walk around that tree.

Around and around he went, pawing the ground with his hoofs and stopping every now and then to glare up into the tree at Kaboel.

[illegible]

Kaboel was getting sleepy, but he fought sleep off. Once or twice he caught himself falling into a doze, and brought himself up just in time to keep from falling out of the tree. That would never do.

Once he landed on the ground he would be ripped and trampled to death by the boar in a matter of seconds—minutes at the most.

Still he was dead tired. The day had been a hard one, and his body ached with fatigue. He searched his pocket—and found a piece of rope. That was all he wanted. Picking a nice comfortable spot in the upper branches of the tree he tied himself to the trunk.

LEWIS HANEY ON SUPREME COURT

State Unemployment
DECISION CUTS
Radical Opposition

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Nov. 25—The Supreme Court has just reached a decision which is important. The importance, however, is not exactly what some vociferous observers are shouting. Briefly the facts, the argument, and the decision, are as follows:

Not long ago, the State of New York passed an act which levied a tax on the payrolls of all employers of four or more persons. The purpose of the tax was to establish a fund out of which benefits were to be paid to the unemployed.

Thus, the New York act was that of a state, and not based upon interstate commerce. It dealt with unemployment benefits, not with old age pensions.

(1)—It collected the tax from all sorts of employers, regardless of their own unemployment and pooled the proceeds in a general fund. This differs from the original Wisconsin plan, which provided for individual reserves to be maintained by each employer according to his particular situation.

(2)—It discriminated between small employers and large, the tax being collected only from those who employed four or more persons.

This New York statue was attacked in the state courts and finally declared constitutional by the highest state court. The matter was then taken to the U. S. Supreme Court. The grounds of attack are obvious.

FIRST, it was argued that one employer, who may be in an industry that has no unemployment, is forced to contribute to a general fund from which he gets no related benefit. Such a pooling process may violate that clause of the Constitution that prohibits taking property without due process of law.

SECOND, the payment is made, in the first instance, by the employer, and without relation to his profits. The proceeds go to employes.

THIRD, the discrimination in favor of (or is it against?) the small employers and their employes, is obvious.

(1)—This is a state statue, and a state may deal with unemployment under its police power as a primary sovereignty. The state's power to tax is also adequate.

(2)—The state must care for the poor and unfortunate, and unemployment is a general public evil for which there may be no individual responsibility.

It should be carefully noted that the defense insisted that the state law has nothing to do with the federal Social Security act, but is entirely independent thereof.

The Supreme Court's tie vote seems to aid the defense. We may infer that the gist of the matter is this:

Within a state, unemployment is a general economic problem which has such broad effects that a general state tax on payrolls, to establish a general fund for unemployment benefits, is reasonable.

We may also infer that the court accepted the contention that the tax on payrolls would be shifted by employers to all consumers. Apparently the discrimination concerning small establishments was not deemed important.

What will be the results?

(1)—The adoption of unemployment reserves by states will be encouraged. The less cumbersome New York system will tend to be adopted.

(2)—The opposition of radical persons to the Supreme Court will be reduced or made less effective.

(3)—The possibility of a later ruling by the Supreme Court against the constitutionality of the Social Security act, or parts thereof, is emphasized. Clearly, now that the states may go ahead with "unemployment insurance" schemes, there is less reason to turn to the federal government.

It greatly extends the "pooling" system, thus involving more indirect relations between taxes and benefits. It includes old age pensions.

This decision, if it be a decision, has little, if any, bearing on the federal government's attempts to force so called "social security" upon the states.

WHISKEY OUTPUT
20,298,744 Gallons in October

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—The Internal Revenue Bureau reported today the nation's distilleries produced 20,298,744 gallons of whiskey in October.

Tax-paid withdrawals totaled 8,202,388 gallons, and stocks remaining in bonded warehouses amounted to 352,628,966 gallons.

Rum produced totaled 236,051 gallons, gin 539,254 gallons, brandy 5,125,257 gallons and other spirits 1,434,772 gallons. Tax-paid withdrawals of brandy for bottling amounted to 298,783 gallons, but in addition 5,308,226 gallons were withdrawn for fortifying wines.

Kentucky led in production of whiskey with 7,840,388 gallons, and had the largest stock remaining in warehouses — 128,029,721 gallons. Tax-paid withdrawals in the state totaled 1,902,428 gallons.

California, with 5,080,985 gallons, accounted for all but 44,262 gallons of brandy produced in October. Its tax-paid withdrawals were 56,659 gallons, and it had 2,957,865 gallons remaining in bonded warehouses.

Brandy production in other states in October included; Connecticut 4759 gallons.

NEW Congressional DRIVE
BANKING LAWS INVOLVED

By ERIC FRIEDHEIM
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Nov. 25—A new Congressional drive for liberalization of federal branch-banking laws was forecast today.

Informed sources revealed that the Federal Reserve Board is ready to offer legislative proposals widening considerably the branch bank powers of national banks.

Board Chairman Marriner S. Eccles favors branch banking and its extension while FDIC has noted a definite continuance of the trend toward operation of chain-store banking operations.

Branch-banking has aroused bitter congressional controversy every time it has been considered. Under present law national banks may establish branches only if a state grants such authority to its state banks.

* * *

Eighteen states now permit state-wide branch banking; 17 allow branch banking within limited areas; nine prohibit branch banking and five have no legislation regarding branch banking.

Advocates of branch banking point to the small, independent country bank as the fundamental weakness of the nation's banking structure. They are completely dependent on local economic conditions and in some cases subject to inefficient management policies.

It is argued that substitution of a branch of a large, well organized bank would give rural communities superior banking service. Should operation of such a branch become unprofitable the parent bank, with its great resources, could close it without loss to depositors.

GILLETTE "Extra" Dividend

Directors of the Gillette Safety Razor Company declared the usual quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share on the common stock and an extra common dividend of 25 cents a share, both payable December 18 to stock of record December 4.

Directors also declared the regular preference stock dividend of $1.25 a share, payable February 1 to stock of record January 16.

Wall St. Hears

New York, Nov. 25—(INS)—That the Missouri Pacific (MOP) will have income available for fixed charges of nearly $12,000,000 this year.

That Jones & Laughlin Steel (JL) will postpone action on elimination of preferred arrears until 1937.

STEEL
HIGHER
PRICES ADVANCE

New York, Nov. 25 (AP)—Advances of $1 to $4 a ton on steel products early this week were preceded by an increased volume of anticipatory buying, resulting in a slight bulge in steel operations in some districts, "Iron Age" said today in the weekly review of the industry.

The average for the country as a whole was about 74½ per cent, up a half point from last week, the Trade Journal said, adding that indications point to a heavy volume of buying within the next few days that will sustain ingot output at its present rate, or higher, until the end of December.

"The announcement of Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., which initiated the price advances, was followed by statements that other steel companies would adopt the same quotations," the review said.

"Buyers are given only until the last day of November to enter orders at present prices for December shipment, the new prices for first quarter going into effect December 1. In pig iron the advances take effect immediately.

"It is the intention of steel mills to take only as much business at current prices as can be rolled and shipped during December, but it is quite possible the volume of buying may necessitate the carryover of some of the lower-priced tonnage into January. However, the higher operating costs of steel companies will make them more exacting in restricting purchases than they have usually been at the time of a price advance.

"Railroad equipment orders and inquiries have spurted, and there will be a large volume of rail orders, possibly as much as 500,000 tons, before the effectived ate of the new rail price, December 1. The automotive industry has been ordering more freely the past week and a larger number of active projects in the construction field are in the market."

The immediate effectiveness of pig iron prices raises the Iron Age pig iron composite $1 a ton to $19.73, the highest since December, 1926. Composite prices of finished steel and scrap are unchanged.

Boston & Albany

Boston & Albany Railroad Co. declared usual quarterly dividend of $2.25 a share due at this time, payable December 21, to stock of record November 30.

Bar Gold

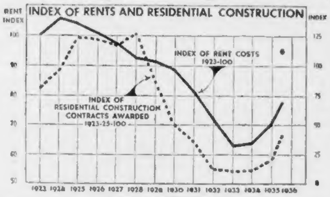
ELECTRIC POWER

Housing Shortage Exists



New residential construction during the past two and one-half years has failed to meet the increased demand of the rent-paying public for new modern homes so that an actual housing shortage exists in some parts of the country.

Then, again, people who rent apartments and houses want these place to be completely modernized in every respect. This has caused considerable expenditures on the part of the owners.

The fact that there are not adequate new homes for rent and that owners must recoup their expenditures for remodeling older dwellings and provide for increased property taxes are all reflected in the sharp rise in rents since 1933.

As measured by the National Industrial Conference Board's index, rents have increased from an average index number of 55 in 1933 to 79.3 in August of this year, an increase of 44 per cent.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, Nov. 25—Not a single banker reached was willing to subscribe to the conclusion drawn from Washington reports on last week's credit conference that another rise in reserve requirements had been tentatively agreed upon.

The general feeling was that such a belief had been too hastily formed, especially in view of the possibility that by the time action is scheduled to be taken, conditions may warrant the use of any of the other methods open to the authorities to check excessive credit expansion. Between now and Christmas, it was pointed out, rising circulation of money for holiday spending, extra and special dividends as well as wage bonuses, should have the effect of absorbing part of the present high total of excess reserves. The surplus normally recedes at this season. With these funds returning to the banks early in January, indications pointing to a resumption of the rise in idle balances may necessitate action then to halt the climb.

Foreigners Taking U. S. Stock Profits

In the face of generally lower security prices in all world markets, bankers noted a sudden repatriation of part of the foreign funds previously invested in American stocks. Curiously enough, while such a movement was reported taking place, the Federal Reserve Bank announced an engagement of $2,222,000 additional gold in England. However, the transaction was arranged before the pound sterling began advancing in the foreign exchange market. The strength of the British rate was held to be associated with the recall of European funds from the stock market. Because foreign security markets also declined, it was thought profits being realized by Europeans from sales of stocks here were being kept in liquid cash and in the respective currencies of the countries where their owners reside.

* * *

Rail Material Buying Spreads

Recent items pointing to the broadening character of railway demand for materials have received scant notice by the Wall street rank and file. Perhaps the reason for this has been the discouraging action of railroad securities the past fortnight and the dubious attitude widely expressed toward the financial position of most carrier systems. One or two of the latest significant developments have had to do with purchases of equipment by roads in receivership. A system in the hands of trustees for reorganization has placed the largest order for locomotives since 1931 and another has petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to construct a 30-mile branch line extension. The tendency in the last few years has been to abandon branch rather than increase such facilities.

* * *

National Supply Dividend Likely

Abandonment by National Supply of a recapitalization plan due to the Delaware Supreme Court decision invalidating a similar procedure in the case of Wilson & Company, complicates the company's problem with respect to the surtax on undistributed profits. Unless a new plan is drafted or some part of the $35 a share preferred dividend arrears is paid in cash out of this year's earnings, it is figured the company will be compelled to pay substantial surtax on current earnings. Net for 1936 is estimated at $7.50 a share for the common, compared with annual deficits since 1931. The plan of capital reorganization, recently dropped, would have given preferred holders a new lower dividend on preferred and common to take care of the arrears. The scheme was intended to obviate the necessity of making a cash distribution against the accumulations so as to allow the company to build up its working capital position affected by substantial losses in recent years.

PRODUCTION UP
New Peak During Week

New York, Nov. 25 (AP) — Electric power production established a new peak during the week ended Nov. 21 at 2,196,175,000 kilowatt hours, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

This output was slightly more than seasonally expected and represented a gain of 1.2 per cent over production of 2,169,715,000 kilowatt hours in the preceding week and a gain of 12.4 per cent over 1,953,119,000 kilowatt hours in the same week last year.

The previous peak was established in the week ending October 31, when output was 2,175,810,000 kilowatt hours.

The Associated Press index of power production, with 1929-1930 taken as 100, advanced for the week to 117.6 from 117.5 the previous week. The index, which is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 104.9 last year.

Low	102.0	94.1	91.9	80.2

Output in all major geographic regions gained over 1935. Per cent changes follow: New England 10.0, Middle Atlantic 12.8, Central Industrial 14.6, West Central 7.6, Southern States 14.3, Rocky Mountain 12.3, and Pacific Coast 8.4.

UNION PACIFIC
Traffic Holds Up

"Our business in October and so far in November has held just about the same level above corresponding periods a year ago as we were showing prior to October," said Pres. Gray of Union Pacific.

In September Union Pacific gross was up 13.7 per cent from September, 1935, and gross for nine months was 16.1 per cent greater than in like period of 1935.

Both gross and net operating income in October showed about the same relationship to a year ago as in September, according to Mr. Gray. September gross was $15,331,491, with net operating income at $3,336,046. For October, 1935, the figures were respectively $14,591,932 and $3,976,639.

GREAT
VAN SWERINGEN MISSED

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

New York, Nov. 25 (US)—The passing of Orvis Paxton Van Sweringen constitutes an immense national loss.

His was a rare creative mind. He had originality, backed by courage and by a habit of fact finding.

Like his brother, Mantis J., also a bachelor, who went nearly a year earlier, he was a casualty of the depression.

The Van Sweringens were the most modest of men. In good times as in bad they shrank from personal exploitation.

Contrary to the popular impression, the Van Sweringen dream of a railroad empire was economically sound. If the contemplated merger had been approved in time by the public regulatory body, the Van Sweringen railroad system would have safely ridden the financial storm. But the endless delays of bureaucratic red tape delayed Interstate Commerce Commission approval of the Van Sweringen plan until 1932.

With financial panic then raging, it was too late to consummate the consolidation of affiliated railroad properties.

O. P. Van Sweringen adduced data to show that the contemplated system as a whole earned its fixed charges one and three-quarter times over throughout the depression. However, with his various properties unmerged, there were during the depression excess earnings in some units and inadequate earnings in others.

Ironically enough, the Van Sweringen railroad troubles sprang principally from an unwieldy debt structure of the operating subsidiaries—from the maturing of debts in hard times when they could be neither extended nor paid off advantageously. When they first entered railroading, the Van Sweringens immediately recognized this type of defect in railroad financing.

Accordingly, soon after they took over control of the Chesapeake & Ohio, which proved their best performer during the depression, they set out to improve its capital structure by reducing the ratio of borrowed capital to equity capital. But they acquired the Missouri Pacific in 1930 to effect such a major surgery, later suffering from the inherited financial mistakes.

The Van Sweringens stayed with the ship and tried to salvage it. One of the memorable incidents in financial history occurred in Adrian Muller's auction shop on Vesey street on September 30, 1935, when O. P. Van Sweringen stood by, and through his economic advisor, Colonel Leonard P. Ayres, was the succesful bidder via the newly formed Mid-American Corporation for controlling stock in the Alleghany Corporation, the principal Van Sweringen holding company dominating 25,000 miles of railroads in four big systems.

When cash was needed for this emergency purpose, two friends, Messrs. George A. Ball and George A. Tomlinson, stepped into the breach and furnished the capital.

It was not the vanishing of their own colossal paper fortune which undermined the health of the Van Sweringens, but worry concerning the losses of others who had followed them. O. P. Van Sweringen had no lust for material gain. He was a genuine artist, and the medium for his work was rehabilitation of railroads.

He and his brother brought a new vision to railroading, at a time when it was in a decadent state.

O. P. Van Sweringen had the same charm and simplicity when he was sitting on top of the world as he had in the moment of defeat.

It was wrong of thoughtless inferiors to heap abuse and criticism upon him. If O. P. and his brother had been mere self-seeking profiteers and selfish adventurers, they could have sold out enough of their holdings during the 1929 boom to have assured perpetuation of their personal fortunes. But they had an objective in mind, and they stayed sincerely with it, losing their own tremendous profits which the ex-newsboys had amassed since their shoestring beginnings.

Through all the vicissitudes, O. P. Van Sweringen retained confidence in America and his belief in the prospects of rehabilitating the railroads.

To have known him intimately was a rich and elevating experience.

Operating LOSS SHOWN IN October

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The October report of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway released today shows a net loss of $15,206 before provision for retirement losses.

This resulted in reducing the net profit for the ten-months' period to $90,019. This, however, is still a much better showing than the company made in 1935 when a loss of $168,037 was shown for the same period.

Railways operating income for the month stood at $519,192 an increase of $1273 over last year. In view of this small gain a reduction in the net loss figure of $10,131 is considered a good showing. And it might have been even better if two accounts, taxes and depreciation and equalization, had not jumped above 1935 figures. In the case of taxes an increase of $12,750 nearly accounts for the margin separating a loss from a profit. But in noting taxes attention is called to the policy of setting up $7500 for federal levies.

The sea strike may prove to be akin to the well-known cloud of silver lining insofar as northern New England rails are concerned. The Bangor & Aroostook normally moves a large part of the potato crop to tidewater shipping points, principally Searsport, Maine. Now, if the strike is prolonged it will mean that potatoes must move to market by "all-rail." The Aroostook would then move them to its connecting points with the Boston & Maine and the Maine Central. These roads in turn would then route the shipments over their lines toward final destinations. "All rail," however, is an expensive way of shipping potatoes and prices can be expected to work higher if such a movement takes place.

Notebook: We understand that G. R. Kinney will probably earn around $4 per share on its preferred . . . Which paves the way for talk of a dividend on the issue in the form of scrip . . . Payable later in the year and redeemable sometime in the future . . . American Chain has had quite a rise this year . . . But if the estimate we hear of $9 per share earned for '36 on the common is even close to right the stock behaved as it had a right to . . . Celotex may show close to $2 per share . . . If stock prices are selling this year "and dividends via the surplus tax law" how will they sell next year if the tax is modified?

* * *

The stock market continues to put on an erratic, jump tape performance. One that is hardly calculated to attract thinking buyers at this stage of the long rise. Yesterday was particularly disappointing in view of the early selling today. After booming back to levels which nearly eliminated the dip of Monday the market created the impression nothing was fundamentally wrong and it had simply been suffering from a case of nerves because news turned unfavorable. Perhaps this was the case as far as actual news developments were concerned. But regarding technical factors we are skeptical. For it seems the market would not have suffered a nervous attack quite so serious if its structure was truly strong.

* * *

This and That: General Fireproofing is said to be benefiting from increasing volume which is helping to ease a sharp competitive position in the industry . . . Pennsylvania earnings estimates have been raised to $3.25 a share for the full year . . . Lehigh Portland Cement operating improvement is credited to management's tight control of expenses, sharp expansion in volume and well-maintained prices in the eastern area where its business is largely concentrated . . . Superior Oil is a low priced oil that may be slow moving but is currently attracting long pull buying . . .

STOCKS Turn MIXED

TRADING PACE SLOWS

While dividends tumbled over each other in their rush to shareholder's pockets, fears of a flare-up abroad were sufficient to offset optimism over general domestic business progress.

Comforting to speculative forces, however, was the fact a number of shares were able to tilt against the trend. After an active opening, the pace slowed and the volume was considerably restricted near the fourth hour.

Bonds, on the whole, trailed stocks. Commodities improved and foreign currencies moved up against the dollar, indicating a little more selling of American issues from overseas.

U. S. Steel preference stock pushed ahead nearly 2 points to a new high, and advances up to a point or so were registered by Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Macy, Allied Stores, Consolidated Edison, American & Foreign Power, U. S. Rubber, American Locomotive, Newport Industries, Texas Pacific Coal & Oil and Loew's.

In the backward division were U. S. Steel common, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, General Motors, Chrysler, American Telephone, Western Union, Anaconda, Kennecott, Cerro de Pasco, International Nickel, Standard Oil of N. J., Socony, Texas Corp., General Electric, Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, Schenley, International Harvester, Deere, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania, Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway.

Current Items

Thoughts of more governmental restrictions on stock dealings brought another drip in exchange seats. A membership was sold for $95,000, off $5000 from the last previous transaction. It was the low mark for the year to date.

Weakness of securities markets in London and Paris, brokers said, induced some offerings in the New York sector, although few of these were from what is termed "important" sources.

In addition to the payment of $7 a share on preferred arrearages by U. S. Steel, financial sentiment was bolstered up by the optimistic note for mill operations sounded by Iron Age.

The survey said indications, based on the lift in steel prices for the next quarter, pointed to a heavy volume of demand within the next few days that will sustain ingot output at its current rate, or higher, until the end of December.

Larger orders for railroad equipment and rails were also noted as well as an uptrend in steel usage by the automobile makers and in the construction field.

HOLIDAY TRADE

Big Volume Seen

New York, Nov. 25 (INS)—Christmas trade will break all American volume records this year, J. R. Ridgway, president of the Investors Syndicate, Minneapolis, predicted today after a nationwide survey indicated the 1935 figures would be exceeded by at least 15 per cent.

WAGE BONUSES

Top BOOM YEAR Mark

By B. C. FORBES

In view of the 10 per cent wage increase granted by the steel industry, the hoisting of prices by $2 to $4 per ton is accepted as reasonable, even moderate.

Since various other industries are raising pay, price advances must be expected. This movement, if kept within bounds, should not retard general economic recovery.

The Supreme Court's 4-to-4 decision upholding the constitutionality of the New York state unemployment remuneration law is interpreted as foreshadowing adoption of similar legislation in many other states. The employing classes favor retention of state's rather than wholesale surrendering of new authority to the federal government.

* * *

The highest-priced hotels in New York lately have been doing full-house business. Reservations in advance have become essential to avoid disappointment.

Even second-rate plays are crowding New York theaters, due, first, to dearth of topnotch shows, and second, to the swelling number of theater-goers.

Demand for automobiles is being sustained most gratifyingly. Leading companies are stepping up production to capacity. Dealers are clamoring for deliveries.

Every prominent European I've talked to all through this year has belittled the daily-expressed fears in American newspapers that war is imminent overseas. Foreign newspapers have not been displaying such scare-headlines as have been featured here for the last two years.

The motor and the steel industries have been leaders in capital expenditures for plant improvement and expansion. Both are optimistic over 1937.

* * *

The boom in British home-building, more responsible than any other one thing for the nation's extraordinary recovery, is being followed by activity in factory-building. Private capital, not the government, is furnishing the funds.

Hopefulness is now expressed by men of affairs that, given reasonable co-operation by the administration, re-employment can be greatly advanced during the coming year—this notwithstanding that the social security act stimulates substitution of machinery for men.

The oil industry, after much travail, has become at least moderately optimistic.

* * *

A wide-open split between the two main factions of organized labor is believed inevitable because of the Napoleonic ambitions of John L. Lewis and the determination of President William Green of the American Federation of Labor to uphold its supremacy.

* * *

Very low money rates doubtless will be maintained by the government. While this enables the federal treasury to borrow at phenomenally low rates and makes it possible for corporations to refund 5 and 6 per cent bonds with 3½ to 4 per cent issues, it reduces the buying power of millions of investors, estates, etc., and curtails the income of insurance companies, savings banks and such like institutions. It is a two-edged sword.

* * *

Under our treaty with Canada, her exports to us have increased far more than our exports to the dominion. And this trend promises to continue.

CHRONIC DYSENTERY

Mr. Ormsby L. Howard, Dry Hill Road, Rochester, N. H., says: "I had been afflicted with Chronic Dysentery for seven years due to chronic Colitis. I had been treated by half dozen different doctors, but got no relief. I read of Dr. Walsh and the many cases of chronic troubles he had cured and I had him treat me and he cured me. I am all right now and took two of my relatives to Dr. Walsh for treatment of their troubles and gave him this testimonial in order that others who suffer from chronic disease may know where to go to be cured." Signed: Ormsby L. Howard.

Optimistic America Joins In Thanksgiving

The millions that work in industry offer thanks for the wage increases and bonuses which have been granted.

IN Europe there is no such happiness.

Once-peaceful Spain is a veritable inferno. Brother fights brother in a disastrous civil war. Cities become mounds of ruins. And civilization itself seems to pass away.

SEATED tomorrow at well-laden tables in homes throughout the country, Americans should join in prayer that the sorrows which beset Europe may never be known in this abundant land.

This nation has come safely through a long and dismal crisis. Everyone suffered, bore his share of hardship.

A Wise Appointment

THE appointment of Joseph E. Davies as American ambassador to Russia affords assurance that the difficulties presented by diplomatic relations between the two countries will be ably analyzed IN THE INTEREST OF AMERICA.

Mr. Davies has the best possible qualifications for the post. As chairman of the Federal Trade Commission during the early World War period, he demonstrated a capacity for effective service.

An authority in the field of international relations, his talents would have been further utilized if he had been free to sacrifice his private interests.

That he is now willing to give the nation the benefit of his experience in a particularly trying diplomatic assignment is a fortunate circumstance.

President Roosevelt, alert to the bearing Russian relations will have upon the success of his second administration, has acted with the utmost wisdom in making Mr. Davies the guardian of American interests in Moscow.

A Successful Experiment

A NEW and virtually unrecognized field for newspaper advertising has been discovered by the B. F. Goodrich Company of Akron, Ohio.

Seeking a more constructive approach to the harmonious solution of labor and industrial problems, the Goodrich Company recently published a series of seven full-page advertisements.

The results were gratifying beyond expectations. And the company now makes this publicity plan a part of its permanent policy.

Other companies and corporations have used newspapers to DEFEND their positions in public matters, but this is the first time space has been bought to ACHIEVE a positive three-way understanding between the public, the management and labor.

It marks a new era in industrial relations. For if it will work in Akron, it certainly will work elsewhere.

Help Fight Tuberculosis

TOMORROW, Thanksgiving Day, thousands of Christmas seals will be mailed to Greater Boston residents.

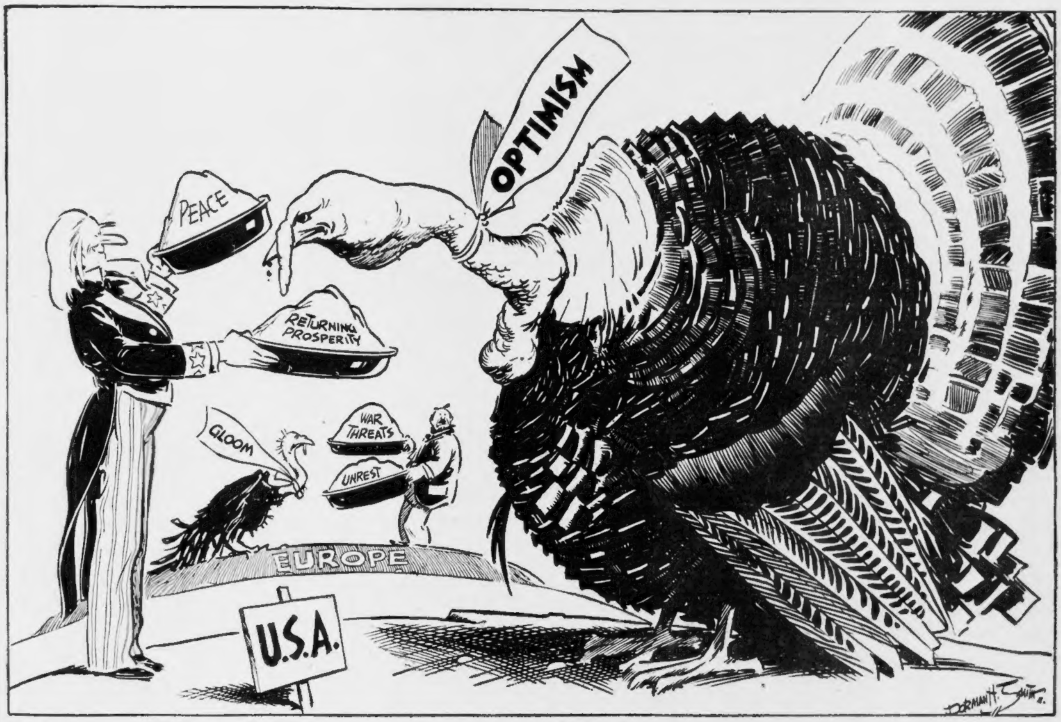
The mailing is an important event, for on the public response depends the maintenance of the Boston Tuberculosis Association and its Pendergast Preventorium for children.

Thanks to this worthy organization and similar groups throughout the country, only fifty of every 100,000 now die annually from tuberculosis.

Three decades ago the death toll was more than two hundred of every 100,000 of population.

Much has been accomplished. Much more must be done. All who can should buy the seals.

America Is Thankful



New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Nov. 25—Vaudeville's troupers have about reached the saturation point. For those who have not found a radio niche or a place in pictures there seems nothing left but to roll along on the reminiscent trail. Recalling days when billing at variety's valhalla—The Palace—was top of the world.

O. O. McIntyre

There are a few split weeks to play in a scatter of movie houses in the larger cities or perhaps a week in a cabaret floor show. But outside these frugal interludes there's not much left in way of engagements. But variety folk are valiants who keep chins up.

Almost any evening there will be a group of them at "Ma" Gerson's, a spic little eatery hard by the stage entrance of the Palace. Most are not old but they live in the past—the past of Sweeney and Duffy, Bert Fitzgibbons, Dooley and Sale and the reliable chin piece comic, Art Frank.

Vaudeville was a show world apart. A constant strive for laughs on stage and off. They covered their jolts by mutual ribbing. The big hope was to have a home in some Long Island village at the end of the trail when the booking offices began to murmur: "Sorry, nothing today."

When one hears of some famous author, financier or artist being a bang-up cook, it's a safe bet that he isn't young. Epicureanism is a blab on age. It's rarely taken up before 40 and mostly around 50. One of the most accomplished literary cuisiners is Bob Davis, the roaming gazetteer. Nothing pleases him more than to collect a lusty crowd of eaters, take to the kitchen and dish-up a highly seasoned meal. His biscuits are unexcelled.

Ted Saucier, the Waldorf's beaming ballyhooist, is another whose self cooked dinners have excited exacting gourmets. Julian Street on occasions can also disappear in the kitchen and prepare something to smack the most discriminating lips.

Expatriates who returned from Paris found one of their gastronomic surprises in the query of American waitress: "Would you like more butter?" Two coquilles of butter are a franc in Paris. Incidentally the waitress—the type once such a comfortable feature of the country inn—is being revived. A happy waitress maketh a fat restaurant.

It's established psychology that the person who puts food on your table can do more for your appetite than all the cocktails, caviar and filet d'anchovie. Many college girls, awaiting the Big Break are serving as waitresses these days.

New Yorkers in large numbers for divers reasons are turning again to modest, chintzy, candle-lit places with a Bryn Mawr hostess and corn-fed willing servers. I sigh for a restaurant in New York—such as the one known to all Parisians and a few Americans, called Sainte-Cecile. On the boulevard Montparnasse a block or so from Du Dome. The food is clean and sane and the lettuce so cool and crinkly. And always there is a dewy red rose beside each plate.

The entire meal with a demi-carafe of table wine compris costs little more than the plate-side rose at an avenue florist's. People come from all over in limousines and taxis, in sweaters and dress suits. But it has no atmosphere, you say? Wait until you know the waitresses and their children!

Incidentally, Paris is to open one of its laugh institutes in New York. They hold a weekly lecture where they cure ills by laughter. It must be sickening to hear a whole audience laughing on purpose.

If I ever feel a rush of poetry to the head I'm going to begin the effusion with: "A fritillary fluttered o'er a waxy fraxinelle." To my mind the line contains the loveliest words in the American flora and fauna.

Gelett Burgess has solved the problem of carrying cigars, sans a cumbersome case, without breaking them or having them slip out of his pocket. He sticks them down in his sock. He is even thinking of patenting a sock with woven pockets in it. A sort of Sockpocket Company, Limited.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

There are people who become slaves to alcohol. And people who become slaves to drugs—various kinds. But more tragic than these and infinitely more pesty—is the MOOD ADDICT. Of which our friend Jerry is Example A, by his own proud admission.

"I have never," says he, "decided what I should do with my life. Without boasting, I think I can state that I have more than average intelligence. My college record was good. My family have always expected great things of me. But I can never remain interested in any one career long enough to make a success of it.

"Being very high strung, I am naturally very moody. My moods sway my life. I have checked them for the last year. The last mood lasted two months. An up cycle continues, usually, from four to six weeks; then will come a corresponding down cycle.

"I understand, of course, that a person as complicated as I am emotionally cannot function by the average law, but—"

So you can't! Yes, I realize, Jerry, that this is a most unexpected and probably a revolting answer. But believe me, my vaporing young friend, it's the medicine you need for what ails you . . . and all your kind.

AN ANCIENT EVIL

Moods—how come you think there's anything new or precious about moods, Jerry? Moods are as old as the first monkey jitters, or just about as reliable as a guide for conduct.

Moods are savage stuff—on a par with belches and gripes. The human being who permits his life to be governed by his moods is as stupid as the tattooed savage who squats before a primitive altar sacrificing dog hairs and frog whiskers to some dread boogum.

Moods are not your reason—they are your escape and compensation. They excuse your inaction—gratify your love for the spotlight. And due to the fact that the race at large is still so ignorant concerning psychology, you manage to get by with it.

Most people still think that there are "high strung" persons who are "different"—instead of seeing you for the stuck-up loafers which you are.

Truly, we are all "high strung" . . . the only difference in us is that some of us exercise control and some of us don't.

If you really wish to make something of yourself and your life, youngster, stop checking your moods and begin to accumulate some real, universal, vitalizing experience. Your moods will teach you nothing about life.

LOOK ABOUT YOU

"He who would save his life must lose it" . . . He who would make anything of his life must forget himself and his personal reactions and begin studying the world and the people around him.

You've "gotten nowhere," Jerry, because you are still where you started—with Jerry himself and his petty, private program. Leave that person and that program and strike out in the current, son. Never mind how you feel—sad or glad, mad or bad.

Begin to use yourself merely as a recording machine for the universal stream of consciousness—for ALL grief and anger, fear and revolt, desire and despair. Then you'll get somewhere.

Caste System's Doom

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

For more than a score of centuries, India's 50 million untouchables have been "children of the abyss," sunken in misery, hungry, emaciated, ragged, cringing and despised. In her own curiously contrived hell, India — land of great art, great scholars and many noble traditions — has doomed these unhappy multitudes to ignominy and pain.

Edwin C. Hill

No one knows why or just how or when the caste system began. Its origin is lost in the far, dark reaches of forgotten history. Hence, the first indications that it is yielding to the forces of the modern world is an extraordinarily important and interesting highlight of the day's news. The enlightened prince of the native state of Travancore, with a population of four million, sweeps aside all this hoary hocus-pocus and throws open the temples to all subjects, regardless of caste.

AN ANCIENT EVIL

Under the intelligent and persistent leadership of Dr. Ambdekar, following the beginning made by Mahatma Gandhi, there have been widely diverse challenges of the system, some of them increasingly effective, and many students of the Far East believe that men now living—and not the youngest, at that—will see the end of this vast human blight, stifling and thwarting not only the untouchables, but the higher castes as well.

Even the most authoritative studies of the beginnings of the Hindu castes leave much unexplained and inexplicable, at least to the western world. The earliest Sanskrit chronicles of the first Aryans who went to India have not a line about ancient castes.

But the interesting thing is that this rigid stratification of human society, unique on the planet, has at last stirred to the trumpet of change which is blaring through the world, for good or ill; for good, it must be believed in this case, for nothing could be worse than this monstrous and cruel stupidity, bulwarked through the centuries by superstition and ignorance.

Why the change at just this stage of the human drama? It's the machine age, I am told by persons who have been to India and who know something about it. The division of labor has mingled men of diverse castes in manufacturing processes. Modern transportation, in buses, trains and trolleys, has made it impossible for the uppity castes always to be dodging the shadow of an underdog.

A Hindu dining at a public restaurant may discover to his horror that he has been served food or drink by some wretch just a notch below him in the caste organization. That sets him running to the temple for elaborate and drastic purification ceremonies, and he may have to knock off work for days before regaining his former social status. It is as if a Western worker were exposed to smallpox and quarantined.

MACHINE AGE

The untouchables live in dismal little huts. Their dress is the loin cloth by which Mahatma Gandhi has signalized his life consecration to the meek and lowly. They can draw no water from a public spring or well; they can share no public utility or convenience; they are barred from the temples; even a man of the lower caste may be beaten publicly with impunity; their food is scraps; their children are naked and their women in rags.

They cannot aspire to education, cleanliness, ownership of property or the most rudimentary human dignity or security, dentistry, medication and sanitation are as far beyond them as the stars, their work is that of scavengers, or the most sodden and hopeless drudgery; their lives changeless chronicles of sad-eyed despair.

The Britisn did not greatly disturb the caste system, in keeping with their policy of respecting native cultures as long as they do not assail her dominion. But the screech of a steam whistle is the trumpet blast which topples the walls of Jericho.

It was gunpowder that toppled the age of chivalry—much of said chivalry being bunk and oppression. Machines may be even a greater leveler. All signs indicate that they already are.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

Federal Revenue estimates are going up and up. In September, the Treasury Department estimated receipts for the current fiscal year would be a little over five and one-half billion dollars.

Now, as a result of the rapid improvement in business and the flood of increased dividends and wage increases, it is predicted, unofficially, that governmental income may rise above the six billion dollar mark.

On the theory that revenues will continue to increase, a balanced budget is being forecast for the next fiscal year. The psychological effect of getting the government "out of the red" will be good.

Senator Harrison, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, says no new or increased taxes are planned for the coming session of Congress. But that does not mean there will be no additional tax burdens on the American people next year. Collection of some new and additional taxes, already levied, is to start next year, further increasing the flow of revenue into the Treasury. These include the Social Security tax and the new Corporation Surplus tax.

The European situation is aggravated by another epidemic of warnings. From Rome there comes a warning to Soviet Russia that Italy will not tolerate a "new center of Red revolution" in the Mediterranean area. England warns Spanish insurgents their threatened blockade of the port of Barcelona will be regarded as "piracy." Indirectly, the United States is warned to keep its ships away from Barcelona as that port is to be closed by the insurgents. One of these days, some nation will call some other nation's bluff and then there will be trouble.

There is quite a difference of opinion among the farmers themselves over what the agricultural program should be. Representatives of the 800,000 members of the National Grange, meeting at Columbus, O., decided that farm subsidies "as an emergency measure are justified to right a temporary wrong or inequality," but "for a long time permanent program we are convinced that agriculture as well as industry must stand on its own feet."

While the Grange was putting itself on record against a permanent policy of subsidizing agriculture, New Mexican delegates to the Great Plains Drouth Committee hearing at Dalhart, Tex., were declaring "no program without production control will give necessary production to agriculture."

It was inspired by the announcement of a new form of brain surgery which has given relief to patients suffering abnormal worry of various kinds. Not so many years ago, such an operation would have been considered murderous. But medical scientists, always progressing, have the vision to see how the impossible can be achieved, the skill to do it and the courage today.
